VIVE NOTRE DAME

The world is rallying to help France rebuild Notre Dame. The iconic Paris cathedral which took two centuries to construct and stood for 850 years was gutted by fire in just two hours

BRAVE FIREFIGHTERS RESCUE KEY RELICS

It took 182 years to build and stood for 855 years.

But it took a mere nine hours for fire to cause catastrophic damage to Notre Dame Cathedral.

Some of the world's most priceless relics were saved by the heroic efforts of Parisian firefighters.

The Crown of Thorns, believed to have been used in the crucifixion of Christ, was among treasures saved from the devastating blaze at the Notre Dame Cathedral.

There were fears the religious relic, which has been housed at the cathedral for centuries, would be lost.

But the city's mayor revealed that firefighters put their lives on the line, forming a human chain inside the burning Notre Dame to salvage the Crown of Thorns.

Mayor Anne Hidalgo thanked the city's first responders in a tweet, revealing they had formed a "formidable human chain to save the works" of Notre Dame.

"The Crown of Thorns, the tunic of Saint Louis and several other major works are now in a safe place," Ms Hidalgo wrote in a translated tweet.

Father Fournier, chaplain of the Paris Firefighters, told reporters he went into the burning cathedral to save the Blessed Sacrament and Crown of Thorns.

The church's beautiful stained glass windows, the Great Organ with nearly 8000 pipes and the bell made famous by bell ringer

STEPHEN DRILL AND NATALIE WOLFE

Quasimodo in Victor Hugo's The Hunchback of Notre Dame were also saved.

General Jean-Claude Gallet, commander of the Paris Fire Brigade told Le Parisien newspaper: "The most valuable works have been sheltered."

The Notre Dame Cathedral was a place of worship but home to an extensive range of artworks and religious relics.

The church housed what was believed to be a piece of the True Cross and one of the Holy Nails, believed to have been used in the crucifixion.

But dozens of priceless paintings, including a 76-piece series based on scenes in the New Testament, were feared to be destroyed as firefighters struggled to remove them from walls.

Notre Dame is nicknamed "The Forest" because of the amount of timber beams used to build the structure. Some of those beams are originals from when it was first built.

The Crown of Thorns has long been considered Paris' equivalent of the Crown Jewels and is stored at the end of a nave in the cathedral.

While the exact age of the relic is unknown, historians have dated it back to Jesus' crucifixion.

The relic originally came from Jerusalem and was carefully placed in the nearby Sainte-Chapelle, a chapel built in the 13th century specifically for the crown.

PLEDGES TO REBUILD

Efforts begin to raise funds to restore cathedral

A WORLDWIDE fundraising campaign has been launched to rebuild the Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris, which firefighters saved from total destruction yesterday.

The fire tore through the roof of the 855-year-old cathedral, damaging almost two thirds of the building and sparking the collapse of a 96m spire.

But firefighters saved the front towers and most of the structure, bringing the inferno under control about 11am AEST.

The exact cause of the blaze

STEPHEN DRILL AND CHLOE LYONS

was not known last night, but early investigations ruled out terrorism or arson. Restoration works were believed to be the likely cause.

French President Emmanuel Macron declared: "We will rebuild. I say to you very solemnly this evening, this cathedral will be rebuilt by us all together ... it is part of our destiny in France and our project for years to come."

He said the fire would burn for several days, but praised firefighters, including one who was seriously injured, for their efforts.

"Tomorrow a national subscription will be launched for people around the country to help rebuild this great Notre Dame," Mr Macron said.

Many of the cathedral's most famous artworks and relics were saved, including a crown of thorns claimed to have been worn by Christ at his crucifixion.

A priest reportedly entered the burning building and handed out treasures to a daring human chain.

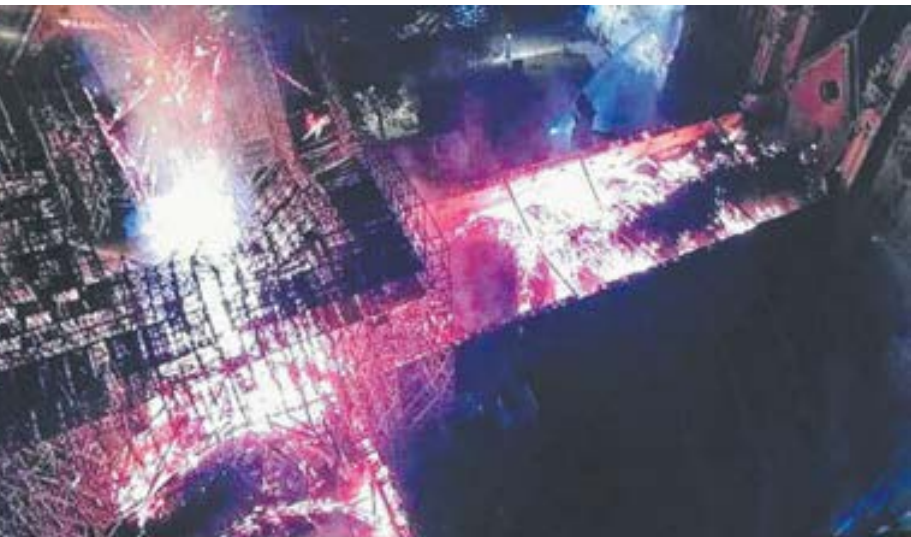

The Pinault family — French billionaires who own luxury brands Gucci, Yves Saint Laurent and part of the Christie's Auction House — pledged $157 million to the rebuild. French oil giant Total also pledged $158 million, bringing the amounts promised to nearly half a billion dollars.

The French Heritage Society, based in the United States, organised a fundraiser as the cathedral was burning. And a series of GoFundMe pages had been set up yesterday. The company was working on how to co-ordinate the donations to make sure they went towards the rebuild.

Any rebuild would likely take decades to replicate the ornate architecture of the cathedral, which was started in 1163.

Authorities worked swiftly to evacuate people from the building when the fire broke out about 2am AEST yesterday. There were no reported injuries among worshippers or tourists. In an impromptu act of togetherness and hope, Parisians and visitors to France's capital came together to pray for Notre Dame as the fire quickly advanced through the building. Some were in tears, some knelt, some folded their hands to make silent entreaties. Others sang with their eyes focused on the sky that had turned yellow and orange, and filled with acrid smoke. Sydneysiders Lee Holmes, 51, and Georgie Bridge, 52, were taking photographs near the famous cathedral moments before it caught fire. "I'm surprised no one got hurt; there would have been easily 1000 people in there or more," Ms Bridge said. The pair said there were people holding their hands over their mouths in disbelief at the sight. And then groups of people began singing hymns in French. "There was a lady singing a hymn, I'm not sure of the name but they were singing 'holy

Mary Mother of God, pray for us sinners' over and over again," Ms Holmes said. Quentin Salardaine, 25, a Paris doctor, said: "This building just symbolises Paris, no matter if you're Catholic or not. I'm not. "I'm just here because I couldn't stay at my place just knowing that this thing is happening and there are people gathering, singing this religious anthem." Elsewhere in Paris, hundreds, and then thousands of people lined the banks of the River

Seine around the small island on which Notre Dame stands, watching in disbelief and horror. The flames spread along the roof at the back of the structure and the spire burned and fell. Notre-Dame de Paris cathedral, which translates as Our Lady of Paris, is one of the city's most famous landmarks. More than 30,000 visitors poured through the building each day, or 30 million each year. stephen.drill@news.com.au WITH AP

MP BILLS US FOR FLIGHTS

ANTHONY GALLOWAY AND ROB HARRIS

JETSETTING Nationals MP George Christensen spent more than $3000 of taxpayers' money to subsidise his own frequent private trips to the Philippines.

The outspoken government backbencher charged the public purse for five separate domestic flights between Canberra and other Australian cities, which linked up with his overseas jaunts, over a four-year period.

The Queensland marginal-seat MP has been under fire since the Herald Sun revealed he spent 294 days in the Philippines between 2014 and 2018.

His constant travel has earned him the nickname "The Member for Manila" among colleagues and sparked concern at the highest levels of government.

It can now be revealed taxpayers were charged a total of $3069.45 for three flights between Canberra and Brisbane, and one flight between Canberra and Sydney.

The flights took off after parliament had been sitting in the nation's capital.

Instead of returning to his home base in Mackay, Mr Christensen booked flights to Sydney or Brisbane to connect with his trips to Manila, saving himself time and money.

Gang tension fears as ex-Bandidos boss Toby Mitchell joins Mongols

BACK IN THE BIKIES

UNDERWORLD figure Toby Mitchell has joined the feared Mongols bikie club.

Mitchell, who left the rival Bandidos bikie club in 2013, has now teamed up with the Mongols, and is planning to join a gang "run" in coming weeks in a high-profile move to announce his membership.

It is not known if Mitchell has taken up a ranking position at the club, but the veteran hardman posted a picture of himself wearing Mongols colours on social media recently.

EXCLUSIVE
ANTHONY DOWSLEY AND DAVID HURLEY

Some outlaw motorcycle gang experts doubted that the controversial gangster would ever become a "patched" member of another outlaw bikie club, considering that he had been the national sergeant-at-arms of the Bandidos club. But Mitchell has been seen at the Mongols' Port Melbourne clubhouse numerous times over the past few months.

A source told the Herald Sun: "By posting pictures of himself wearing Mongols gear, this is a show of force. It's telling everyone that these are the people that have got my back and will look after me".

The move is expected to prompt a strong response from Victoria Police in an effort to quell any potential escalation of rivalry among gangs.

Mitchell, who has survived two shooting attempts on his life, has been among the most infamous crime figures in Melbourne in the past decade.

He is a keen Instagram user and often posts pictures of his activities to his 34,000 followers.

Mitchell has come under the spotlight over several incidents and court appearances since he was last released from prison in 2017.

He was also among the first Victorians to be slapped with one of the Firearms Prohibition Orders recently introduced to allow police to conduct warrantless searches of those who have been served with them.

Truth, trust, and technology

'MOB MENTALITY' ON NET, SAYS NEWS CHIEF

MARK DUNN AND JEFF WHALLEY

THE amplified digital world had created major challenges in assessing information quality and was testing our capacity for empathy, News Corp chief executive Robert Thomson said in his Keith Murdoch Oration last night.

"That we live in times in which everything from change to reputation to controversy is digitally amplified, with the volume often turned up to ten, has been obvious for years, or at least should have been obvious," Mr Thomson said in his speech, Truth, Trust and Technology, at the State Library of Victoria.

"As a result, we have institutionally ingrained some seriously bad behaviour and have dominant digital companies culturally ill equipped to cope with the contemporary challenges," he said.

Mr Thomson said "Big Digital" had adopted a "line of least compliance" as the capability for information and image distribution expanded.

"Had fewer politicians, and not just in Australia, not been seduced by net narcissism, we may have cognisant communities better able to cope with the existential challenges.

"That includes, sometimes tragically, the teenagers whose insecurities and vulnerabilities are magnified cruelly in so-called social media — or the seemingly powerful global companies that panic and prevaricate at the first mutterings of the anti-social media mob."

The Australian-born, New York-based CEO, who began his career as a copyboy at The Herald, said "a mob mentality" had taken hold and "illiberal liberals" roamed the net with an "insatiable quest for indignation and umbrage".

While access to information had grown exponentially, "we are challenging our capacity for empathy," seeing "a strange phase in seeking affirmation through alienation" while some elements of the digital experience "clearly have the ability to radicalise, whether the neo-fascist or the jihadist".

One example of the mob trend was "the seething secularism that portrays any person of faith, whether an evanescent evangelical or occasional attendee at mass or synagogue or mosque or temple as a nutter, a fruitcake, a devotee of the deviant".

Mr Thomson also spoke of historic challenges faced in the evolving relationship between Beijing and Washington, now "in the midst of a crucial shift".

While lauding China's transformation from socialist-central planning to a market-driven economy, benefitting so far 700-800 million people, Mr Thomson said China retained a "binary approach to trade" and has "obviously had the better of the bilateral deal".

"It always seemed naive to presume that the Chinese Communist Party would match economic with political reform, and so it has proven."

More than 280 of Melbourne's biggest names in business, politics and philanthropy attended the oration. AFL chief Gillon McLachlan said it was important to get behind the oration, which raises funds for the library.

"There are so many good causes around Melbourne, and Robert is one of the most engaging and interesting people I have run into," he said.

Herald & Weekly Times chairman Penny Fowler said the event was important for Victoria.

"As a family and a company we've been long-term supporters of the library," Ms Fowler said.

"It is important to us that my grandfather Sir Keith Murdoch is honoured in this way."

Premier Daniel Andrews said Mr Thomson was a "very popular Victorian".

"It is always great to welcome him home," he said.

BRITTANY GOLDSMITH

THOUSANDS of Victorians received treatment for alcohol and drug troubles in 2017-18, a study has revealed.

An Australian Institute of Health and Welfare report revealed more than 130,000 Australians sought alcohol and other drug treatments, with alcohol the most common drug of concern.

Alcohol was the biggest issue for Victorians seeking professional help, with cannabis topping the list for Queensland, and amphetamines for South and Western Australia.

AIHW spokesman Matthew James said alcohol remained the most common drug clients sought help for, despite a 6 per cent decrease since 2013-14. "Over the last five years, alcohol has consistently been the most common drug clients received treatment for," he said.

"Amphetamines now account for a quarter of all treatment episodes, up from 17 per cent in 2013-14. One in five treatment episodes were for cannabis, and treatment for heroin continues to decline."

More than half of all clients were aged between 20 and 39, and one third were male.

Nearly 96 per cent of clients received treatment for their own habits, with the remainder requesting support for someone else's drug use.

SHANNON DEERY

TWO men have admitted stealing more than half a million dollars of baby formula as part of a crime syndicate authorities believe could still be operating.

Gurwinder Gill, 37, and Herdeep Singh, 21, yesterday admitted to a string of charges over their roles in the gang.

Gill admitted stealing $541,000 of goods while Singh said he was responsible for taking just over $175,000 worth.

A third accused has remained on the run since the trio was arrested in August.

Police say other unidentified men were involved in the syndicate and yesterday opposed a bail application by Gill.

Gill admitted to 20 charges over the commercial burglaries in a deal with prosecutors that saw 14 charges withdrawn.

Singh admitted to eight charges after another 15 were dropped.

They pair robbed a series of sites across Melbourne from June to August last year, stealing up to $90,000 of goods at a time. What they did with the goods remains unclear.

Gill failed in his bail bid yesterday.

Both men will return to court in August for a pre-sentence hearing.

SOPHIE ELSWORTH

THE nation's largest bank, the Commonwealth, has been forced to repay 8000 staff who were short-changed by a total of up to $15 million.

A series of embarrassing blunders over the past decade saw workers at CBA and its subsidiary lender Bankwest severely underpaid their salary, superannuation, interest and leave entitlements. Both have now begun the huge task of reimbursing thousands of current and former staff.

The Finance Sector Union's national secretary, Julia Angrisano, blamed the "major stuff-up" on the bank's poor accounting and information technology processes.

Bank faces $15 million repayments

"Hardworking bank staff deserve an apology and a commitment from the CBA's chair Catherine Livingstone and CEO Matt Comyn that this kind of pay bungle won't happen again," she said.

"In banking the rules are well and truly broken when the strongest, most profitable bank sets up systems that underpay already low-paid workers."

Ms Angrisano said more than $10 million in backpay must be repaid, and this could quickly climb to $15 million once full restitution is made.

The FSU said the payment problems included:

A FAILURE by CBA to regularly check every employee's wage, leading some staff to be paid at below the award rate.

INCORRECT severance payouts, as a result of the failure to check workers' pay rates.

A MISSED full day's pay every year for Bankwest staff, for an unknown number of years.

CBA's reputation has already been tainted by revelations at the financial services royal commission of a long list of organisational failures.

These included breaches of anti-money laundering and counter-terrorism financing laws, misconduct within its financial advice business, and serious problems in its life insurance division.

The pay discrepancies were discovered by a review of the entitlements of both current and former employees, which CBA began in 2017.

A CBA executive general manager, Andrew Culleton, said the bank "regrets these errors and apologises."

Mr Culleton said: "Our people have worked and continue to work hard to support our customers, and I want to assure them that we're fixing our systems and processes so this doesn't happen again. All current and former employees with entitlements owing will receive backpay with interest and their leave balances adjusted where applicable."

He said the first tranche of repayments amounted to $4.8 million, including interest.

News of the short-changing of staff follows recent reports that CBA was planning to cut more than 10,000 jobs to save $2 billion in annual costs.

Australian Council of Trade Unions secretary Sally McManus hit out at the CBA over the plans, saying the bank, one of the nation's strongest companies, was deciding to cut "massive amounts of jobs just because it can."

RETIREMENT FEARS LOOM

WORRIED Australians fear they will outlive their retirement savings and many regret not stashing away more cash, a report has found.

The National Seniors Australia's Feeling Financially Comfortable report surveyed more than 5000 Australians aged 50 and over during the past 14 months and found the following:

53 per cent worry they will outlive their savings;

28 per cent regret not contributing more money to retirement; and 31 per cent said contributing more was not an option.

Australians are living longer which means they need more money once they eventually stop work.

Have input on mental health

SUBMISSIONS to improve Victoria's mental health system — or highlight its failings — are being sought from today by the Royal Commission charged with overhauling it.

As a series of community forums continues to gather information across the state, the Royal Commission into Victoria's Mental Health System has opened an online portal allowing people to make written submissions and supply images, audio or videos to inform future recommendations.

GRANT MCARTHUR

Royal Commission chair Penny Armytage said contributions could range from brief comments to longer, more formal submissions under the online process that raises questions about reducing stigma and discrimination, preventing suicide, early intervention and how people access and experience treatment and support.

"It is an issue that affects all Victorians, so it is very important when we are thinking about recommendations to improve the system that we hear from as many people as possible," Ms Armytage said.

Midway through a series of roundtable discussions in regional areas, she said several themes were being raised, including addressing the stigma that prevents people seeking help, questions about the role of police in the system and the need for earlier interventions.

Victorious Tiger Woods

WIN DRIVES GOLF INDUSTRY

TIGER Woods' win at the Masters could revitalise the golf industry, which has struggled in the past decade while the game's biggest star was hobbled by issues on and off the course.

Bridgestone Golf, whose logo was displayed on the golf balls Woods used, says its website traffic soared after his win.

PGA Tour Superstore says sales were up at the weekend by 50 per cent from a year ago.

And shares of Nike, the sponsor that stood by Woods after his 2009 car crash and reports of extramarital affairs, rose yesterday, as did the stocks of other golf equipment makers that aren't connected to Woods.

"The golf industry has been waiting for him to win again," said Rick Burton, a professor at Syracuse University.

Nike didn't waste time capitalising on Woods' win, posting a video on Twitter that had more than 24 million views in 24 hours.

As a former Bandidos boss with known underworld associates, Mitchell has remained of interest to the Australian Federal Police's anti-gangs squad and Victoria Police's anti-bikie Echo Taskforce.

Mitchell has also had to deal with tensions within the underworld over the past two years, but appears unfazed by any potential threat.

The Mongols established a chapter in Melbourne in conjunction with a national "patch-over" of Australian-based club the Finks. The majority of the latter's members crossed over to the international club in 2013.

That same year, Mitchell quit the Bandidos.

Mitchell was shot outside Doherty's Gym in Brunswick in November 2011. He was hit five times and nearly died.

Police investigated two underworld heavies over the shooting, which occurred in broad daylight, but no charges were laid.

In 2013, Mitchell survived another shooting after he and other Bandidos members were ambushed by Hells Angels in Melton.

BRITTANY GOLDSMITH

COLES has partnered with Goulburn Valley fruit preserving company SPC in a deal which will see up to 1.8 million more cans of Australian fruit produced for the supermarket giant each year.

Shepparton fruit grower John Poulos said the major partnership with one of Australia's oldest providers of preserved fruit would allow farmers to sell fruit from more than 36,000 trees.

"Each peach tree represents a seven-year commitment until they're producing fruit, and it's even longer for pears," Mr Poulos said. "So to have a commitment from Coles for this fruit makes life so much easier."

The deal introduces a new range of canned fruit, including 100 per cent Australian pears, peaches, apricots and fruit salads.

Ballarat fire alarm

SOPHIE WELSH

At least one property has been lost in a bushfire that burned 19 hectares of land on the outskirts of Ballarat yesterday.

The fire was brought under control about 3.20pm, after blazing through a pine plantation in Mount Clear, 10km south of Ballarat.

There were unconfirmed reports last night that a campfire was the cause of the blaze.

The Country Fire Authority was investigating.

A CFA spokesman confirmed that the spread of the fire had been halted, but that the fire was still burning within the control lines.

Pine plantation on outskirts burns

The bushfire broke out on Tinworth Avenue about 11.30am.

Crews from more than 30 fire trucks battled the blaze over several hours, aided by a firebomber that attacked the flames from above.

More than 90 firefighters worked to prevent the fire from reaching properties in the neighbouring residential area.

A CFA spokesman confirmed that a shed containing gas cylinders was "completely engulfed" in the blaze.

"The gas cylinders were venting off," he said.

The CFA said it was unable to confirm whether more properties had been damaged until the fire was out.

Fire crews remained at the site overnight and were expected to continue their efforts into today.

An emergency warning issued for the Mount Clear area shortly after noon was downgraded to a "watch and act" alert at 3.21pm and then to an advice message by about 7.30pm.

The message said there was currently no threat, but people affected should stay informed.

Residents in Mount Clear and surrounding Sebastopol evacuated.

Residents gathered at a community meeting at the Buninyong Community Centre late yesterday to hear from emergency services representatives.

The fire had quickly burned through the pine plantation, sending plumes of black smoke into the air.

Aerial footage showed emergency services vehicles driving near the fire as crews worked to extinguish the flames. And pictures posted to Twitter showed water-bombing aircraft helping firefighters tackle the blaze.

The Vic Emergency map showed that the fire crossed Whitehorse Rd, which was last night closed to traffic.

Several streets surrounding the fire were also closed.

The blaze is the second fire to hit the Ballarat region in the past month.

In March, a large grassfire burned through nearby Bunkers Hill.

The CFA is urging campers to be extra vigilant when lighting campfires over the Easter long weekend, as April's run of hot and dry weather continues.

DJs PUTS FASHION ETHICS IN SPOTLIGHT

DAVID Jones is the first Australian department store to publish a factory list in the form of an interactive map that has been designed to make its manufacturing processes more transparent for customers.

The commitment comes as an increasing number of consumers seek more insight into how their clothes are sourced and made.

The retailer is set to publish the factory list as well as celebrate key brands making a positive impact in the Australian fashion industry in support of Fashion Revolution Week, which is an annual global campaign calling for a fairer, safer, more transparent fashion industry.

Nicole Bennett, ethical trade specialist at David Jones, said Fashion Revolution is important because it shares the company's values and communicates them in a positive and relevant way.

The retailer is highlighting eight key Australian designer brands — Manning Cartell, Bianca Spender, Nobody Denim, Viktoria & Woods, Veronika Maine, Outland Denim, Bassike, and Kitx.

"They are each contributing in their own unique way to a positive and purposeful fashion industry," Ms Bennett said.

Tariffs to hit paper imports

ROB HARRIS

THE Latrobe Valley's biggest employer will be shielded from cheap foreign imports after the federal government said it would apply tariffs on A4 copy paper from four nations.

The anti-dumping duties to apply on paper from Finland, Korea, Russia and Slovakia range from 3.8 to 16.4 per cent.

The move is a bid to shore up Australian Paper's Maryvale mill, which has been under siege from below cost-price paper flooding the local market.

Dumping occurs when the export price to Australia is below the selling price, or below the full cost of the product, in the country of export.

Australian Paper chief operating officer Peter Williams said the decision had confirmed the ongoing threat of damage to local manufacturing from dumped copy paper.

"The Australian copy paper market has been impacted for a number of years by the importation of dumped product that not only puts Australian jobs at risk but brings into question the social responsibility of parties engaged in this activity," he said.

He said the commission "must continue to keep a close eye" on imports to ensure dumping measures were not circumvented, allowing copy paper to enter the market below a fair pricing level.

"Importers should also be discouraged from sourcing copy paper from new countries willing to sell into our market at dumped prices."

DOG PADDLE 220KM TO SEA

A DOG found swimming more than 220km from shore by workers on an oil rig crew in the Gulf of Thailand has been returned safely to land.

Chevron Thailand Exploration and Production rig worker Vitisak Payalaw posted on his Facebook page that the dog was seen last Friday swimming toward the platform.

The rig's crew managed to rescue the dog by putting a rope around its neck and hauling it up.

He said the crew speculated it might have fallen off a fishing trawler, and dubbed him "Boon Rod," or "Survivor".

Dame Edna Everage, the most famous alter ego of comedian Barry Humphries.

A comedy of errors

THE BARRY IS DEFROCKED OVER TRANSGENDER ROW

BARRY Humphries' comments on transgender people were a major factor in the Melbourne International Comedy Festival's decision to dump his name from its awards.

Festival director Susan Provan said his references to transgenderism as "a fashion" and reassignment surgery as "self-mutilation" had loomed large in the reasons for the removal of the famed comedian's name from the "Barry Award".

"I think those comments were hurtful and inappropriate. It doesn't represent all of his humour but I don't know what he was driving at," Ms Provan said.

She said the decision, which prompted a Twitter storm yesterday, had been brewing for the past year.

A third of the award's recipients have been women, so it was appropriate to remove gender from its name, she said. Ms Provan accepted Humphries, 85, and his alter ego, Dame Edna Everage, were among the world's most famous Australians, but "he doesn't necessarily represent the breadth of what we're doing".

"He has put Australian comedy on the map many years before anyone else was, but comedy ... is much larger than Barry and what it was when he paved the way," she said.

"The festival has grown, the environment has changed and it's appropriate we recognise that our important awards couldn't be named after one man."

In 2016, Humphries described gender reassignment surgery as "self-mutilation".

And last July, the Spectator

MIKEY CAHILL AND CATHERINE LAMBERT

quoted him referring to transgenderism as "a fashion — how many different kinds of lavatory can you have? And it's pretty evil when it's preached to children by crazy teachers."

In response, Barry winners Hannah Gadsby and Zoe Coombs-Marr said his name should be removed from the award.

The festival board's decision was unanimous, but Melbourne comedians were split.

Greg Fleet was against the change, saying Humphries had "more impact here and internationally than anybody else".

"I don't think what he said was right and I don't think he was trying to be provocative; I honestly believe that's what he thinks," he said.

"It's not a very now thing to say but he's not very now."

Tony Martin said: "Humphries' comments do seem 'rather problematic', to use a phrase he would surely find ridiculous, unless they were actually said by Sir Les (Patterson), in which case they may have been intended as satire.

"But assuming they were shocking enough to erase his many years of innovation and genius, surely we can do better than the ungainly mouthful of The Melbourne International Comedy Festival Award ... I'm sure we'll be hearing references to The Barry for many years."

Cassie Workman, a transgender comic, said: "To embrace something new, it becomes necessary to abandon some of the old, not disrespectfully ... but because we no longer want to carry some notions forward with us."

A post on Dame Edna's social media last year said: "I disassociate myself from anything Barry Humphries has to say. I fired him years ago but he refuses to accept dismissal."

Energy in firing line

PAUL STARICK

ALMOST $30 billion has been ploughed into clean energy in the past two years as renewables now comprise almost one-fifth of Australia's electricity generation, a Herald Sun investigation has found.

The surging levels of investment mean more than half of South Australia's electricity is now generated by renewable energy, along with 17 per cent in NSW and Victoria.

Queensland and Western Australia, which have the lowest proportion of renewable electricity generation, have 18 of the nation's top 20 postcodes with the highest rate of rooftop solar panel installation.

Labor is vowing to make Australia "a renewable energy superpower" by ensuring that 50 per cent of the nation's electricity is sourced from renewable energy by 2030, with measures including providing a $2000 rebate to buy and install battery systems for 100,000 households on annual incomes of less than $180,000.

But Energy Minister Angus Taylor said intermittent wind and solar generation needed to be backed up by dispatchable generation and storage to keep prices down.

Queensland and Western Australia have 9 and 8 per cent respectively of their electricity generated by renewables. Yet 13 of the top 20 postcodes for rooftop solar panels are in Queensland, five in WA and two in Victoria.

Ten of these top 20 areas are below the national median weekly household income of $1438 — nine are in Queensland. Three of these, in Bundaberg, Beenleigh and Caboolture, take in the critical marginal seats of Flynn (1.1 per cent, Nat), Forde (0.7 per cent, Lib) and Longman (0.8 per cent, ALP).

Small-scale renewable energy systems, such as rooftop solar panels and solar water heaters, now have a generation capacity of 13.4 million megawatt hours of electricity.

Subsidies for renewables since 2001 have included the Renewable Energy Target and state feed-in tariffs, under which householders get paid for selling energy back into the electricity grid. The total figure for state and federal government subsidies during this time has not been estimated.

However, the RET is estimated to add $73 to an annual electricity bill in 2018-19, according to the Australian Energy Market Commission.

Mr Taylor said Labor had failed to learn from the mistakes of state and territory governments that had adopted "reckless targets for intermittent, unreliable generation, without back-up".

Labor climate change and energy spokesman Mark Butler said: "Australians love renewable energy because it brings down power prices and cuts pollution."

Christensen bills taxpayers for flights

Rules around parliamentary expenses entitle MPs to a publicly funded flight from Canberra to their home base before and after parliamentary sitting weeks.

There are no direct flights between Mackay and Canberra, so Mr Christensen has to connect through other cities.

A spokeswoman for Mr Christensen said yesterday: "George has responded to previous queries and no further communication will be entered into."

The frequent flyer has dismissed previous attacks about his regular overseas trips as a "smear campaign" and denied any of his private trips were billed to the taxpayer.

On September 5, 2014, Mr Christensen charged taxpayers to fly from Canberra to Brisbane. He then left for Manila for 14 days.

On February 12, 2015 he flew from Canberra to Brisbane on a business-class flight costing $688.65, to then fly to the Philippines for five days.

On August 20, 2015 he flew from Canberra to Brisbane, charging the public purse $763.74, and then left for five days in the Philippines.

In June 2017 he went to Manila for 17 days, having departed from Sydney after catching a flight from Canberra costing $121.30.

On June 1, 2018 a $877.01 flight from Canberra to Brisbane preceded an eight-day Manila stay.

He has previously said he went to the country to visit his now Filipina fiancée and undertake church work.

Queensland Labor Senator Murray Watt said there were questions to be answered as to why Mr Christensen timed his personal trips to coincide with the end of sitting periods.

"Was this to save himself hundreds of dollars in flights?"

Activists' dirty tactics exposed

A SECRET leaked dossier by activist group GetUp! orders its volunteers to lie to wavering Kooyong voters that Treasurer Josh Frydenberg helped to bring down Malcolm Turnbull and even tells them how to respond if a constituent says he is a "good person".

The document lays out the Left-wing group's dirty tactics in the inner-Melbourne seat, ordering its volunteers to tell voters that GetUp! "does not support any party or a candidate".

But volunteers are then told to suggest voters "take a look" at the policies of independent candidate Oliver Yates, despite other independents being in the race.

GetUp! is targeting Liberal MPs across Victoria, including Health Minister Greg Hunt and former minister Kevin Andrews.

In Kooyong, volunteers are also instructed to tell voters Mr Frydenberg, with Peter Dutton and Tony Abbott, was "part of the coup" that removed Mr Turnbull from office.

NATIONAL POLITICS
REPORTER

Mr Frydenberg supported Mr Turnbull in the ballot last August and remains close with the former prime minister.

If a voter says they like Mr Frydenberg personally, they are told to say: "Mr Frydenberg might be a nice person, but he is part of a bad government. Malcolm Turnbull was a nice person, too ... if (he) couldn't make any change on our values or our issues — how will Josh Frydenberg?"

Group members are also given a list of "bad things Josh Frydenberg has done", which includes the claim that he "failed to get any real action on climate change".

"He's part of the chaos in Canberra. He's in Coalition with Peter Dutton, Tony Abbott and Barnaby Joyce," the guide says.

Mr Frydenberg yesterday accused GetUp! of doing the "dirty work" of Labor.

"I have no time for them.

They are not impartial. We've been talking to lots of people in the electorate and the feedback is very positive," Mr Frydenberg said.

The group, which has thousands of active members, is also set to cold-call voters in Kooyong in the lead-up to the election.

A GetUp! spokeswoman yesterday told the Herald Sun members had been targeting electorates for "weeks".

"Conversation after conversation is confirming that everyday people are thirsting for political leadership on a range of issues, such as making our climate safe for our kids and strengthening our public health system," she said.

It comes as Prime Minister Scott Morrison was yesterday forced to defend an under-fire Liberal candidate for the Victorian seat of Chisholm over homophobia claims.

Gladys Liu is under pressure for describing LGBTI issues as "ridiculous rubbish" and arguing same-sex marriage is "against normal practice".

Mr Morrison said Ms Liu had led an "amazing Australian life" and he was proud to launch her campaign.

Labor leader Bill Shorten will today head to Perth, promising to give Australians with leukaemia and blood cancer access to new lifesaving drugs and therapies.

Should the Labor Party win government, it is promising to invest $20 million to give blood cancer patients access to clinical trial drugs and therapies for blood cancer through a new program.

HEARTBEAT
DEATH LINK

MIDDLE-AGED men with a heart rate of more than 75 beats per minute are at risk of early death, research suggests.

University of Gothenburg researchers tracked nearly 800 men born in 1943. Their resting heart rates were measured in 1993 — the year they turned 50. Their heart rates were taken again between 2003 and 2014. During this period, 119 of the 798 died before their 71st birthday and 237 developed cardiovascular disease.

$150m tipped for centre

NATHAN MAWBY

A MONSTER property, which is home to the Novotel Melbourne Glen Waverley hotel, is on the market and could smash the city's suburban price record.

The 1.1ha property, which includes the Century City Walk shopping centre and its eight-screen Village cinema, Strike bowling bar and restaurants, collects almost $8 million a year in rent and is expected to sell for at least $150 million.

But with scope for development, it could top the $181.5 million shopping centre record set when Burwood One sold to a Melbourne-based investor with links to Hong Kong last year, according to CBRE national director Mark Wizel.

"It will be in excess of $150 million," Mr Wizel said.

"I think the vendor's expectations aren't necessarily to surpass Burwood One, but with the underlying quality of Glen Waverley as a location and the future prospects for growth, I wouldn't be surprised if it does break the record."

Savills' Michael Simpson is also working on the sale.

"Someone will buy it, collect the $8 million in income a year, and work on plans to redevelop the site in the next few years," Mr Wizel said.

"It's the jewel in the crown out there."

It is being sold by Sydney-based property investment firm iProsperity Group.

'Animal lover' pleads guilty to cruelty charges

REBEKAH CAVANAGH

A SELF-PROFESSED animal lover illegally exported exotic Australian lizards stuffed inside cooking appliances for $600 per package in what has been described as an "atrocious" case of animal cruelty.

Jeng Chiang, 28, from Taiwan, pleaded guilty in Melbourne Magistrates' Court to 67 charges including aggravated cruelty to an animal, possessing wildlife unlawfully, and packing an animal in a way that causes unnecessary pain.

The tourist admitted sending a total of 40 eastern water dragons, 19 eastern blue-tongue lizards, and one black-headed monitor in six separate consignments bound for Hong Kong through Australia Post.

Chiang wiped away tears as Magistrate Alan Spillane yesterday jailed him for six months, saying his "despicable conduct" was "extreme cruelty to defenceless animals".

"You have shown a complete callous disregard for the welfare of these animals," Mr Spillane said. "It was done purely for profit."

Surveillance images showed Chiang walking to a Melbourne CBD post office with shopping bags containing the live lizards after picking them up out of boxes left in a public toilet on January 21 this year. He had organised the pick-up through phone app WeChat.

His arrest two days later ended a 10-month joint investigation by the Department of Environment Land, Water and Planning, Australian Border Force, Department of Environment and Energy, Australia Post and RSPCA Victoria.

The court heard he came to Australia in September to work on a farm in Bundaberg, Queensland, for a month to make money to help his sick mother.

But while there he met a Chinese man who offered him a chance to make more money.

He returned in December on a three-month tourist visa to take up the man's offer.

When his lawyer told the court he was "someone who loves animals", Mr Spillane quipped: "Really?"

Prosecutor Ty McLeod had earlier detailed how the animals had their legs taped to restrict their movements and were stuffed in socks before being concealed in the bottom of rice cookers and steamers.

One blue-tongue lizard was so badly injured that it had to be euthanased, Mr McLeod said.

"The veterinary reports on this matter show these animals suffered a lot of stress," he said.

"Cruelty here is a big aspect. They were put on a long-haul flight with no food, no water and no thermal control."

Mr Spillane took into consideration Chiang's guilty plea, the fact he had no priors and had been co-operative with authorities, but said "they hardly detract from the atrocious conduct".

HARRY'S FRIEND REMEMBERED

Harry meets Daphne in 2018

THE 99-year-old former servicewoman who touched the world with her heartfelt interactions with Prince Harry has been remembered as a “cheerful, cheeky and chatty” inspiration at her funeral in Sydney.

Daphne Dunne was farewelled by family, friends and high-profile Australians, including NSW Premier Gladys Berejiklian and Prime Minister Scott Morrison’s wife, Jenny Morrison, in a service at the St Phillip’s Anglican Church yesterday.

The service came almost 75 years to the day in the same church Ms Dunne married her first husband, Lt Albert Chowne, who was later killed in action in New Guinea towards the end of World War II in 1945.

Ms Dunne, who died of pneumonia on April 1, famously caught the attention of Prince Harry on three royal visits to Australia.

Liver fear as a thirst is building

Tradies, farmers drinking more

THE building boom could prove a bust for the livers of construction workers.

Healthy pay and regular work have given tradies high rates of disposable income, which experts say has contributed to a rise in their alcohol use over the past three years.

Tradies, who earn an average of $81,636 a year, were one of just three categories of workers to buck a national trend of falling drinking rates since 2015, according to the Australian Bureau of Statistics.

The other occupations in which alcohol consumption rates rose were farmers and arts and media professionals.

Experts say the reason tradies are drinking more is because they’re relatively well paid and the industry has a better employment outlook than other labour-intensive industries, such as manufacturing.

The percentage of construction and trades workers who consumed alcohol in the past week rose from 72.5 per cent in 2015 to 77.5 per cent last year.

Demographer Simon Kuesenmacher said tradies might drink more because they had a relatively high disposable income, and would feel comfortable splashing cash at the pub because there was plenty of work in the pipeline.

“We’re still building and construction is up — tradie jobs are not in danger. If I were a tradie, I would feel reasonably safe in my job,” he said.

“But if I were to work in manufacturing, I hear all those stories of jobs going overseas.

“As a tradie you work physically hard. You head to the pub with your fellow tradesmen at the end of the day,” he said.

Flinders University Associate Professor Ken Pidd said having drinks after work was a cultural phenomenon for building workers, though their alcohol consumption had decreased from the level of the 1980s, when it was common for them to knock back a few beers at lunchtime.

The number of farmers who reported drinking in the past week rose from 68.6 per cent in 2015 to 76.6 per cent last year.

But the reason for this was more to relieve stress. Prof Pidd said that considering the drought, this was unsurprising.

“They’re under high levels of personal and financial stress — that can play into consumption rates, against the national trend,” Prof Pidd said.

“Whenever a job is stressful, physically or emotionally or psychologically, that increases patterns of risky drinking.

“That could be why there has been an increase in consumption,” he said.

Drinking rates among arts and media professionals also increased, from 66.4 per cent of the workforce in 2015 to 74.8 per cent last year.

The figures show chief executive officers and managers are still the biggest drinkers, though their consumption rate fell slightly from 80.8 per cent in 2015 to 77.9 per cent.

Rates for carers and aides dropped from 48.4 per cent having consumed a drink in the past week in 2015 to 41.7 per cent last financial year.

SCHOLAR BROKE THE SHACKLES

David Brion Davis

DAVID Brion Davis, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian whose landmark trilogy about slavery made him among the world’s most respected and influential scholars, has died.

Dr Davis, a professor emeritus at Yale University, died on Sunday at age 92. Yale announced that he died of natural causes.

Starting in 1967 with The Problem of Slavery in Western Culture, Prof Davis traced the evolution of how the West regarded human bondage.

He drew on the Bible, Greek philosophy and political and economic debates to show how the West justified slavery before beginning to turn against it in the 18th and 19th centuries.

He explored debates over whether the Bible supported or condemned slavery, and how revolutionary leaders in the US and France supported slavery while fighting for their own freedom.

NEW SHOT AT DEPRESSION

A NASAL spray could be a new way to tackle depression.

Based on a horse tranquilliser, the spray gets to work in as little as two hours, far quicker than widely used medications that can take weeks to kick in.

The liquid contains a compound called esketamine, which is thought to act on the brain chemical glutamate to restore connections between brain cells.

The US Food and Drug Administration last week approved the use of the spray for patients with depression who do not respond to other treatments.

Heritage listing for stand

IAN ROYALL

THE grandstand at Sandown Racecourse has been given heritage listing as a place of “architectural and aesthetic significance” to the state.

The concrete and brick structure was built in the early 1960s with extra bays added in 1976.

The building, originally named the Thomas S Carlyon Stand, has been recognised for its “sophisticated and elegant form” as an example of post-war grandstand construction.

Construction of the grandstand was progressively completed between 1963 and 1965. More than 50,000 people attended the official opening on June 19, 1965.

Fire in a restaurant and bar damaged part of the grandstand in November 2014.

Melbourne Racing Club chief executive Josh Blanksby said the club had identified the significance of the structure as part of a broader review into the heritage of the course, now known as Ladbrokes Park.

“The state listing was sought in order to protect an important landmark for the local area and ensure the building can be appropriately managed and used into the future,” Mr Blanksby said.

Modernist architects Alan Bogle and Gordon Douglas Banfield designed the grandstand.

Heritage Victoria acting executive director Erin Williams said the cantilevered roof and bold single tier produced a structure of “dynamism and daring visual impact”.

Kiana Ishak (18 months from Craigieburn) has spent the past year in the Royal Children's Hospital. Picture: JAY TOWN

BRAIN BUG BAFFLING THE EXPERTS

KIANA Ishak's brain is harbouring a baffling medical mystery, a puzzle never seen anywhere in the world.

For the past year, the 18-month-old has lived at the Royal Children's Hospital, hooked up to a rotating combination of medications aiming to rid her of a rare and puzzling infection. It has made her one of the RCH's longest stay patients.

All the key infectious disease institutes in Australia and across the world — including animal laboratories — have been combed for answers. But her specific bug, a protozoa parasite, has not been documented before.

And yet, while the infection has inflamed the surface of her brain, the Craigieburn toddler is known on her hospital ward for being an engaging and happy girl, who is generally meeting her developmental milestone.

“It hasn't affected her in any way which is really good. That is the only thing that has kept me strong,” mum Rozelin Mikhael said.

“I always say I'm waiting for a miracle, but the miracle is already done because Kiana is still here.”

At seven months, Kiana had a fever that wouldn't budge with multiple doses of antibiotics. One day at home, she had a seizure. An ambulance was called and Kiana has not been home since. She has doctors from general medicine, neurosurgery, nephrologists and urologists all on her case. They meet each Friday afternoon just to discuss Kiana.

Her lead clinician, paediatrician Daryl Efron, said it had been one of the most challenging cases he had worked on, and they had gone to “enormous lengths” to try to kill the bug while also minimising side effects.

“Our goal has been if not to eliminate the organism, which we haven't yet, then at least suppress it so it's not affecting her brain and she can function well,” Dr Efron said.

“We think she's going to need long term treatment, possibly for years.”

Compo wait in train pain

Apology for rail chaos

PUBLIC transport authorities have apologised for the train chaos that hit the Melbourne's network on Monday but commuters will have to wait a month to learn if any compensation is available.

Thousands of passengers were left stranded, with huge lines stretching across Princes Bridge, as a fatal accident combined with scheduled train shutdowns to cause lengthy delays.

Incidents reports filed by police and safety authorities indicate an 83-year-old Hampton woman was hit and killed at the pedestrian-only crossing at Holyrood St about 4pm on Monday.

The tragedy, now being probed by the Coroner, closed the entire Sandringham line as police, emergency services and Metro staff worked to clear the scene.

But under revamped transport contracts, passengers will not be compensated specifically for the incident.

They may only be compensated if Metro Trains fails to meet monthly performance targets.

It was announced last week that commuters with a myki could apply for compensation after just 88.4 per cent of metro services were on time in March — well short of the 92 per cent target.

“What we will do is get the April performance data and, if those same thresholds are not met, a similar payment regime will be applied,” Transport Infrastructure Minister Jacinta Allan said today.

Ms Allan also said it was not

possible to run trains on some sections of line because it was an “older” line and required some manual operation.

“Any accident and incident on the network is a difficult one,” she said.

“It is a difficult one, obviously, for the family and it's a difficult one for the staff who respond to these incidents.”

Public Transport Victoria chief executive Jeroen Weimar apologised for the disruptions and said safety at level crossings was always a concern for the statutory body.

“We have had a longstanding position around concern for a number of level crossings on our network,” he said.

“They are incompatible with a high functioning, high performance and high frequency railway service.”

“They are very contentious issues to take out at the local level and clearly people rely on convenient points of access.

“We'll continue to review the evidence at this location and any other location to make the best decision in the interest of safety and wider community convenience.”

Vietnam snares meth haul

POLICE in central Vietnam have seized more than half a tonne of methamphetamine in one of the country's largest drug busts in recent years.

Four people were arrested after police stormed a house in central Nghe An province where they found 600kg of meth, some of it stuffed in speaker boxes. The meth shipment was “about to be loaded onto trucks ... for delivery”, according to a report from Cong

An Nhan Dan, the official mouthpiece of the Ministry of Public Security, after the bust on Monday.

Dozens of police swarmed a house where the drugs were being stored, occupied by an elderly couple believed to be related to one of the dealers, according to state-run Tuoi Tre newspaper.

Police said they were investigating the source and destination of the drugs.

LONGER HOURS A 'BLESSING'

CHINA's richest man is calling for his countrymen to work 12-hour days, six days a week.

Jack Ma, the founder of Alibaba — China's eBay — described the chance to put in more hours as a “blessing”.

Fellow tech entrepreneur Richard Liu, boss of online shopping giant JD.com, has echoed the call, speaking out against a rise in the number of “slackers” in China.

Defending the so-called 996 system — working from 9am to 9pm, six days a week — Mr Ma, 54, said: “I personally think being able to work 996 is a huge blessing”.

He said he had regularly worked long hours as he built Alibaba in the 1990s.

China's economic growth has slowed to an annual pace of 6 per cent after exceeding 10 per cent for more than 25 years.

Conwoman ducks fine

'Cavalier' Gibson faces court date

CANCER conwoman Belle Gibson has been ordered to face court to explain why she has not paid a cent of a $410,000 fine imposed on her for her deception. The Melbourne mother has been summoned to appear at the Federal Court next month to be grilled at a hearing examining her financial status. If she fails to attend, an arrest warrant might be issued to bring her before the court. The summons has been issued just weeks after Gibson reportedly returned from a luxury African holiday. Gibson, 27, has thumbed her nose at the courts since she was fined following a September 2017 finding that she was guilty of misleading and deceptive conduct. Consumer Affairs pursued civil action against The Whole Pantry founder, who duped consumers into buying her wellness app and cookbook on the basis of her false claims that she had miraculously cured her brain cancer using natural remedies. The blogger also failed to pass on promised donations to charities, including to a family whose young boy had an inoperable brain tumour and has since died. The consumer watchdog has repeatedly asked the court to order Gibson to pay what she owes or face charges of contempt of court. But the disgraced wellness guru has not even agreed to go on a payment plan. Gibson has tried to keep a low profile since her cancer lies were exposed, failing to appear for any of her scheduled court hearings. But last month, A Current Affair pounced on her at Melbourne Airport, as she returned from a lavish five-week holiday in East Africa with her son and partner. She would not comment about her trip, estimated to have cost at least $15,000, or say why she had ignored the orders to pay a fine. In November, Federal Court judge Justice Debbie Mortimer issued Gibson with a penal notice, which stated that if she refused to pay or ignored the order she would be "liable to imprisonment, sequestration of property or other punishment". Justice Mortimer described Gibson as having a "cavalier attitude" and "little respect for any official processes". Ms Gibson must face the court on May 14. rebekah.cavanagh@news.com.au @rebekahcavanagh

Cholesterol drugs only cut it for some MILLIONS of patients around the world taking statins to lower the risk of heart disease fail to achieve the recommended levels of cholesterol reduction after two years of treatment, new research has found.

Statins — a class of medicines designed to reduce cholesterol linked to heart disease and strokes — are among the most commonly prescribed drugs in the US and Britain.

The cholesterol-lowering industry is worth billions of dollars, but guidelines over who should take statins are often unclear.

A team of researchers in Britain reviewed the public health records of 165,000 patients taking the medicine and found that fewer than one in two reached the recommended “healthy” 40 per cent cholesterol reduction within two years.

“Statins do work and are effective, but some trials have highlighted there have been variations in responses among some patients,” said Ralph Kwame Akyea, research associate at the University of Nottingham’s Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences.

“But we’ve shown there are some people not reaching this (safe cholesterol level) and the reducing of their risk is lower,” he said.

Mr Akyea’s study, published in the journal Heart, found that people on average started taking statins at the age of 62. The research found nearly 23,000 cases of cardiovascular disease within six years of statin treatment among patients.

In total, 51 per cent of patients had an insufficient drop in cholesterol even while taking the drugs.

Mr Akyea stressed that the study — the largest of its kind — could not establish why some patients responded positively while others did not.

Hops give memory a jump

BITTER hops in beer could boost memory.

Studies have suggested moderate alcohol consumption benefited cognitive function, but couldn’t show how.

Now research reported in the Faseb Journal shows that iso-a-acids, or IAAs, found in hops (which give beer its bitterness) increase levels of the brain chemical dopamine in mice, activating the vagus nerve, important in memory.

The researchers at Kobe University School of Medicine, Japan, noted an improvement in spatial and object recognition memory when the mice were administered IAAs.

IVF a boon for health

Landmark study offers reassurance

YOUNG Australian adults who were conceived by IVF are as healthy as their naturally conceived peers, and in some ways even healthier.

In the world’s largest study of its kind, researchers from the Murdoch Children’s Research Institute compared the health of almost 200 IVF-conceived adults in their early 20s to mid-30s with the health of the general population.

They used questionnaires and a three-hour medical screening of each participant.

In the IVF cohort they found no evidence of heart, growth, metabolic or respiratory problems, and the men had slightly lower blood pressure.

While more IVF-conceived adults reported suffering asthma as a child, there was no difference in adult incidence.

Also, the IVF cohort felt better about their finances, safety, environment, and housing than the control group.

Lead author Professor Jane Halliday said until now little has been known about the long-term health of children born through the 40-year-old technology, and whether there was an increased risk of adult-onset health conditions.

Prof Halliday said that given that today, one in every 25 Australian children born is conceived through IVF, studies into the long-term health of these children were vital.

“We think it’s another piece in the jigsaw, and a piece of information parents can use to help them feel more confident going into this technology,” Prof Halliday said.

“It’s also important for those who have been born already with these technologies, that the chances of anything going wrong are no greater for them than for their peers.”

The study involved researchers from the Hudson Institute of Medical Research, Monash University, University of Melbourne and the Royal Children’s Hospital.

The findings have been published in the journal Fertility and Sterility.

The Melbourne team hopes to continue following these IVF-conceived adults over the long term to see whether health problems appear later.

They have already begun a study focusing particularly on young men born through the most common type of IVF, intracytoplasmic sperm injection, to see whether infertility can be passed on.

Melbourne’s Ash and Oliver Yap, 30 and 27, said their parents had long celebrated their IVF conception, and they were not surprised such adults had higher levels of wellbeing.

“Since we’ve been little, it was almost like mum’s bragging rights, that she could conceive children through a new technology,” Ash said.

“We were always well looked after, and we were given everything to make the best of who we are.

“You’re the outcome of your genetic make-up, but also how you’re brought up and the environment in which you were raised,” he said.

JOEYS THRIVE ON MILK OF HUMAN KINDNESS

THESE joeys are milking the funds of those looking after them.

Melbourne's Joey and Bat Sanctuary feeds its joeys 100 bottles of milk a day and is asking for donations to help cover its supply costs.

Julie Malherbe, who runs the sanctuary in Heidelberg, which gives shelter to vulnerable native animals, gets up at 2am every morning to tend to the tiny creatures.

But she said it is well worth it.

"It's an absolute honour and a privilege to be able to look after our native animals," she said.

shelter from rescue groups and local residents, and are often left orphaned after their parents are hit by cars or caught on fences.

Kangaroo joeys get housed in special pouches, designed to mimic the effect of their mothers, and get fed and washed every day.

The not-for-profit sanctuary is not open to the public and is almost entirely self-funded, so the costs of buying feed and materials can stack up.

Mexico opens up intelligence files

LEE Harvey Oswald was there just before he shot former US president John F. Kennedy, and Fidel Castro and Che Guevara were, too, not long before the Cuban Revolution.

Mexico's intelligence services gathered material on all of them, and millions more.

Now, President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador is throwing open the spy agencies' files, part of his promise of sweeping change.

Mr Lopez Obrador, an anti-establishment Leftist, apologised last month for past abuses committed by the intelligence services.

"We lived for decades under an authoritarian regime that limited freedom and persecuted social activists," the president said.

Calling to "strengthen our memory of history," he ordered the spy agencies to open their files — 12 million in all.

Anyone will now be able to visit the former prison where the archives are housed and peruse any file — though most of them are not available yet. Officials are redacting them to remove sensitive personal information, a process they say will take about four years.

The files — a small number of which had already been released for other reasons — reveal how Mexico spied on a huge range of figures, from comedians to presidents to the writer Gabriel Garcia Marquez and artists Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera.

Oswald has a 110-page file, declassified in 2016, chronicling his brief and bizarre visit to Mexico City in 1963, when he tried and failed to obtain Cuban and Soviet visas — one of the most scrutinised chapters in the Kennedy assassination. Castro's and Guevara's files, meanwhile, show how Mexico tracked the revolutionaries, and arrested them but let them go.

PEANUT ALLERGY DISCOVERY

RESEARCHERS have found a way to suppress the allergic reaction to peanuts.

Peanut allergens bind with an antibody called immunoglobulin E (IgE) in susceptible people, setting off a chain reaction that can lead to anaphylactic shock.

Now researchers at the University of Notre Dame in the US have prevented allergens binding to IgE using a substance called covalent heterobivalent inhibitor.

Writing in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, researchers said the findings pave the way for new allergy treatments.

THUMBS UP FOR RIFLE

■ IT would be interesting to test how many people these days would pick up a hitchhiker with a .22 rifle poking out of his backpack.

That's just what happened to Ken Prato in 1963 after he travelled three days by train to Western Australia.

"I hitchhiked a further 100km to my destination," says Ken, from Ballarat.

"The young couple who gave me a ride were happy to put me in the back of their car with their two small children — still no worries about the rifle in my luggage under my feet!"

A KICK OUT OF THE PAST

■ YOU know you're getting old, says Ric Acott, of Greensborough, when you can remember the days when Australian rules football was a very robust game featuring teeth-rattling bumps and physical man-on-man contests. "These days there's more biff in ballet dancing and croquet," he says.

IOU an age check

IT must be a ripper of a riddle when more than nine out of 10 people come up with the wrong answer.

Peter Young's brainteaser yesterday about the $6 IOU note caught out scores of In Black & White readers.

In the riddle, inspired by a current TV ad, a woman hands her husband a note reading "IOU $6", and says he gave it to her when he was six years old.

So what is the oldest the man could be now?

More than 90 per cent of readers were adamant the answer is 59 — because decimal currency was introduced in 1966.

But the real answer is 60, because the man may have had a birthday since February 14, the date decimal currency was introduced in 1966.

Congratulations to Kevin of Patterson Lakes, the first in with the right answer yesterday, followed by Alan of Wentworth, and Ricky Platt, from Welshpool.

Though as Andy from Eltham points out, if he cheated with the IOU or came from the US, he could be any age.

As many guessed, the riddle is based on a current TV ad for McDonald's, featuring a couple who appear to be in their 70s or 80s.

While readers disagree if the man gave the note when he was six or 16, either way the "chronological inexactitude" has been bugging readers.

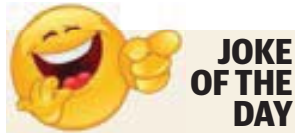

One reader, Lana, wants to tell McDonald's "to get their advertising department to do a bit of fact checking before they make such silly ads, which are obviously incorrect".

Got another tricky riddle? Let us know.

A BIRD IN THE HAND

MANY of our readers feed wild magpies by hand, but this one fed a magpie friend perched on his hand. For months, "Ed" called in every morning to Bernie Harrington's place in Bendigo. "I only had to sit in the chair and he would appear from nowhere," Bernie says. "Ed would always eat from my hand and would give me a peck if I wasn't fast enough with the mince meat. After we returned from seven weeks overseas, he was back sitting on my arm looking for more minced meat and our 'singing' together continued. He stopped coming so we assume he's gone where all the good magpies go."

JOKE OF THE DAY

WHEN we decided to sell our house, we nailed "FOR SALE BY OWNER" signs on two trees in our front yard.

Before long, the doorbell rang.

HEART SURGERY BREAKTHROUGH

GRANT MCARTHUR

A GRANDFATHER with a failing heart and no traditional option to help him has been saved in an Australian-first operation.

Roger Reinhardt, 88, was back on his feet a day after having a new valve placed inside a leaking valve he received during open heart surgery 12 years ago, but which was now threatening to cut off blood to his heart.

Mr Reinhardt's surgeons at the Royal Melbourne Hospital hope the success of Friday's operation will open the door to saving others who could not previously be saved with modern valve replacement techniques.

With palliative care seemingly the only option for Mr Reinhardt when his old heart valve failed a fortnight ago, the Bairnsdale grandfather of 11 was offered the chance to see if a new operation could save his life.

"I am privileged to be able to do this for them," Mr Reinhardt said. "I had become very, very short of breath and it happened gradually over four or five weeks before it got to the stage I could hardly breathe at all."

A technique called transcatheter aortic valve replacement (TAVR) — where a catheter is used to push the valve into place inside the worn-out valve and take over its job — has become common in recent years to save patients in Mr Reinhardt's condition.

But, like 3 per cent of such cases, Mr Reinhardt's coronary artery is placed so close to the leaky valve that any attempt to replace it would push the device over the coronary opening and block blood supply to his heart.

Having investigated a new BASILICA technique being pioneered in the US to overcome the issue, Royal Melbourne Hospital cardiac surgeons Dr Matthew Brooks and Dr William Wilson gave Mr Reinhardt a new chance.

Passing an electrified wire through Mr Reinhardt's femoral artery to his leaking valve, they cut a V-shaped gap in its side before passing a new valve along the same route and inserting it inside the old device.

Although the old valve blocked the coronary artery, its strategically placed gap allowed blood to keep flowing.

"He has been in hospital for weeks now and we haven't been able to get him out so he would have been palliated," Dr Brooks said.

"He became the first (for the surgery) because the timing was right: they have done a handful of cases overseas and his anatomy was ideal for this procedure."

Dr Wilson said: "He had been stuck in hospital and unable to be discharged due to heart failure — hopefully this will get him out of hospital in the next day or so".

BIKER KILLED

A NORTHCOTE man, 24, was killed when his motorbike collided with another bike and two cars on the corner of Roseneath and Hoddle streets in Clifton Hill about 8pm on Monday. The other rider was seriously injured and taken to hospital, as was one of the drivers, who suffered non-life threatening injuries. Police are seeking dashcam footage and any witnesses, including those who may have seen the bikers travelling together.

WITNESS APPEAL

POLICE set up a caravan off the Melton Highway at Stratheden Court in Sydenham yesterday, seeking information about the killing of Vicki Ramadan, 77, whose body was found in her home in Marlborough Way, Sydenham, about 9.45am on April 6. They were also seeking information on her whereabouts since March 23.

ROBBERY CHARGES

A BOY, 15, has been charged with robbery and another two, 15 and 18, with attempted robbery over a hold-up in Elisabeth St in the city about 1am on March 4. The victim, who was walking with a friend, was approached by three males and two women and attacked and robbed of cigarettes. An attempt was also made to steal his jewellery.

WOMAN MISSING

POLICE are seeking help to find Sarah Johnson, 53, who was last seen in Croydon about 2.30pm on Monday. She was wearing black tights, a black T-shirt with a diamond print, and thongs. Described as thin, blonde, and 160cm tall, she is known to frequent the Mooroolbark and Keysborough areas.

GIRL MISSING

POLICE are also looking for Sapphire Harrison-Corney, 14, who was last seen in Moore St, Mt Martha, about 10am on April 14. Slim, 167cm tall, with brown hair and brown eyes, she is believed to be wearing either grey tracksuit pants and a dark grey hoodie, or denim shorts and a multi-coloured singlet top. She is known to frequent the Patterson Lakes, Frankston, Chelsea and Mordialloc areas.

Threats over mosque attack film

PEOPLE charged with possessing or distributing the video of a gunman's deadly rampage at two New Zealand mosques last month have been receiving death threats.

Footage of the horrifying massacre, in which 50 people were killed, was live-streamed and quickly spread on the internet after the attack.

Authorities warned people against sharing the video, which they declared illegal in New Zealand, as a wave of revulsion rippled through the country.

Six people appeared in court on Monday charged with possessing or spreading footage of the March 15 atrocity.

Prosecutor Pip Currie said "death threats have already been made" against some of the defendants. The names of five of the six cannot be published due to a court order.

Judge Stephen O'Driscoll

released three of the defendants on bail, ordering the suppression order remain in place and warning against anyone taking the law into their own hands. "It would be wise to let justice take its course without any outside interference by anyone either supporting those who have come before the court, or anyone wishing to exact some form of justice on them before they come before court," Justice O'Driscoll said.

FIRST LADY HAPPY TO SERVE

MELANIA Trump says she is ready to serve another four years as First Lady if her husband is re-elected.

"I love what I do," she said on Monday.

The First Lady revealed her intentions in a question-and-answer period with students at Albritton Middle School in Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

She travelled there with Karen Pence, the wife of US Vice President Mike Pence, to tour the installation and meet students as part of their focus on military families.

When a student asked if the pair wanted to serve again, they said they would.

"I think our husbands are doing (a) fantastic job and I will support my husband if he decided to run again," Mrs Trump said. "And yes, it's a privilege, a great honour to serve and I will be here."

Mr Trump announced a re-election bid during his first year in office.

FORTY million cyber attacks have been made on web pages of public institutions since Wikileaks founder Julian Assange was stripped of asylum.

Patricio Real, deputy minister for information and communication technologies, said the attacks began on Thursday after Assange's arrest and removal from the London embassy, where he had holed up for seven years. The attacks had "principally come from the United States, Brazil, Holland, Germany, Romania, France, Austria and the United Kingdom," and internally, he said.

SHOOTINGS CLAIM FOUR

POLICE said a man, 60, was in custody following four deliberate shootings that claimed the lives of two men and two women in the city of Penticton, in British Columbia.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Superintendent Ted De Jager said the suspect and the four victims had known each other, but he gave no details.

He said the suspect had turned himself in.

Such gun violence is rare in Canada.

kills owner

A LARGE, flightless and highly dangerous bird called a cassowary has killed its owner in Florida, news reports said.

The man was raising it and other exotic animals on his property in Alachua county in the north of the state, local TV station WCLB said. The bird attacked 75-year-old Marvin Hajos on Friday after he fell by accident, the report said.

He later died in hospital.

Cassowaries have a four-inch dagger-like claw on each foot, and are the world's most dangerous bird, according to the San Diego Zoo website.

Eco-protesters choke London

RADICAL eco-demonstrators paralysed London's roads and vandalised oil firm Shell's headquarters yesterday, beginning a two-week protest.

Thousands of largely middle-class activists created human barricades at five major landmarks across the capital, bringing traffic to a standstill and infuriating commuters.

Hundreds of youngsters on a school break for Easter swelled protest numbers.

Left-wing campaign group Extinction Rebellion said the environmental protests could escalate in the next fortnight.

Three men and two women were arrested on suspicion of causing criminal damage after a revolving glass door at the Shell building on the Thames was smashed. The group said it aimed to cause at least £6000 of damage so the crime was serious enough to be tried by jury in a Crown court, providing another platform for its cause.

Other activists were taken away by police after gluing themselves to the door, sloshing oil on the building and climbing scaffolding to spray graffiti slogans.

Simon Bramwell 47, of Stroud, Gloucestershire, an ex-builder who co-founded Extinction Rebellion, glued himself to the building to "prevent crimes against humanity".

Katerina Hasapopoulos, a mother of three also from Stroud, also glued herself to the front of the building and declared: "Shell cares only for profit and I have three beautiful young girls who I want to see grow up to have a future."

Thousands of people also gathered at Oxford Circus, Waterloo Bridge, Parliament Square, Marble Arch and Piccadilly Circus, stopping traffic; others lay down under trucks.

Police shut down the protest at Marble Arch at 7pm because of "serious disruption".

Protesters are demanding the government introduce a legally binding policy to reduce net carbon emissions to zero by 2025. They say they will continue to block roads in London for up to two weeks and "escalate civil disobedience" if demands are not met.

Motorists were forced to take a detour at Waterloo Bridge after activists turned it into a "garden" by placing dozens of potted trees and rows of herbs and flowers.

Speeches were made from a stage and groups of people sat in the sun on picnic blankets. In one speech, Professor Jem

Bendell, of Cumbria University, told the crowd: "Today will be beautiful, but it might also be stressful, especially as the rebellion unfolds."

The protests are part of a campaign expected to see similar environmental demonstrations in at least 80 cities in more than 33 countries.

Scotland Yard said it had "appropriate policing plans" for the demonstrations, and officers would "support the public order operation during the coming weeks".

Police advised people travelling around London in the coming days to allow extra time for their journey in the event of more disruption.

GoT ratings smash

KIT RISES TO THE OCCASION

KIT HARINGTON has come clean about the very unexpected accessory he was forced to use during a pivotal scene in Game of Thrones.

In an interview with Esquire, Harington, who plays Jon Snow, confessed that he wore "f--king high heels" while filming one of the show's most intense episodes — Battle of the Bastards — in season six.

According to the actor, Thrones producers had him wear them during the battle scene in a bid to make him look more formidable.

"My costume weighed 33 pounds (15kg), and you'd carry all of that on your shoulders all day," he said.

"Plus, I was in f--king high heels, because I'm short and they need me to look taller than other people, so I'm carrying 50 pounds (23kg) in high heels."

Google lists his height as 1.73m — 2cm shorter than his co-star SOPHIE TURNER.

THE first episode of Game of Thrones' final season has blitzed ratings for Foxtel, with more than one million people in Australia tuning in.

Preliminary findings reveal the first episode reached an overnight linear audience across all airings of 962,000 viewers, an increase of 17 per cent on the season seven premiere in 2017.

Foxtel anticipates those numbers to grow significantly once the consolidated data becomes available.

The first episode also delivered an additional total premiere day audience of 333,000, who streamed it live or on demand across Foxtel Now and Foxtel GO.

"The Wall may have fallen but last night's ratings have rocketed Game of Thrones higher than ever as Australia joined the rest of the world in watching this global television event in numbers never before seen on Foxtel," said BRIAN WALSH, Foxtel's executive director of television.

"Yesterday's viewership is a testament to the hunger that fans have had over the past two years for the return of the unrivalled action, drama and intrigue that only Game of Thrones can deliver and we are thrilled with the result."

Mr Walsh added on-demand streaming of all past seven seasons of Game of Thrones was higher than ever.

Last season's debut drew 820,000 viewers, which was the highest ratings for a series in the history of subscription television in Australia.

INSPIRED TO BE GAME

■ BERNARD CURRY says he has drawn inspiration from Game of Thrones while filming for prison drama Wentworth.

Curry hosted a screening of Monday night's first GoT episode at ACMI Federation Square, with guests including Deadline Design's SHAYNNA BLAZE (pictured with Curry) and Neighbours star MATT WILSON.

"I'm a big Game of Thrones fan," Curry said.

"We actually use the term in Wentworth when talking about making big moves — 'Let's Game of Thrones this'."

Curry is tipping Arya Stark to take the throne.

"She's bad ass and done training with the man with no face and she's like a cool assassin," he said. "Jon Snow and Daenerys seem too obvious."

SHEERAN'S BAD NOTE

■ GAME of Thrones star MAISIE WILLIAMS was thrilled when showrunners surprised her with ED SHEERAN's cameo as a Lannister soldier last season, but many fans had an entirely different reaction.

The singer was so brutally mocked for his appearance in the Season 7 premiere that people wrongly believed that was the reason he briefly deleted his Twitter account.

"I'm sure they (knockers) think my character got brutally, brutally murdered, but I think my character is still out there. I think he's chillin'."

"It was fun being in Game of Thrones, but they should've killed me off in the episode. That probably would've been the redemption for people that didn't like it," Sheeran reportedly told Buzzfeed.

SHANINA SET TO SHAIK IT

MODEL SHANINA SHAIK (above) has channelled her inner dominatrix for a busy day three of Coachella, decked out in mesh, leather and a harness skirt.

The Melbourne-born model landed in California for the famous festival three days ago with her husband, DJ RUCKUS.

The pair originally met at Coachella in 2015 and married last year — very similar to fellow Australian model NICOLE TRUNFIO who met her husband GARY CLARK JR at Coachella in 2012, where they wed exactly four years later.

AMERICAN singer MIGUEL (above) was one of the performers at an Australian Coachella party.

The Desert Beach Club x Nana Judy party was a French Riviera-style pool event that capped the three-day music festival.

"I was looking forward to being back in the desert of Coachella this year," said Nana Judy's GLENN COLEMAN.

Australian brand Bondi Sands also hosted a party, while Melbourne women flying the flag included BEC JUDD, NADIA BARTEL and STEPH CLAIRE SMITH.

In step with a legend

MICHELLE WILLIAMS has been lauded for her latest project, which draws on the lives of legendary choreographer and director BOB FOSSE and his wife and muse, Broadway dancer GWEN VERDON.

The Hollywood star plays the role of Verdon alongside SAM ROCKWELL as Fosse in the FX series Fosse/Verdon.

The couple's only daughter, 56-year-old NICOLE FOSSE (pictured with Williams), served as a creative consultant and co-executive producer. She said Williams was devoted to doing justice to Verdon.

"I was on set almost every day, I worked with both Sam and Michelle independently outside of the studio," Nicole said. "Sometimes Michelle would motion over to me (on set) and be like 'what am I missing?' — looking for inspiration from me."

"Michelle is such an incredible actress. She is always coming from such a genuine and authentic place of creating depth and nuance in the character of my mother."

"My mother was quirky. She was a little bit offbeat and I've always imagined it could be very easy for an actress to not understand the depth of all the emotions in my mother, and the contradictory qualities of being incredibly strong and vulnerable at the same time, and Michelle has really been able to do that."

Fosse and Verdon are remembered around the world as having changed the face of entertainment together.

Marquee lights on Broadway dimmed on the night of Verdon's death in October 2000.

Fosse, the only person to win an Oscar, Emmy and Tony in the same year, is known for his many works including Chicago and Cabaret, with his unique choreography transcending into modern works, namely BEYONCE's Single Ladies film clip.

But his obsession with his work, extramarital affairs and drug addiction saw him spiral into depression. He died of a heart attack in Verdon's arms in 1987.

Comedy takes unfunny turn

THROUGH comedy, licence is granted to poke fun at taboos, foibles and to challenge societal mores. Like all forms of art, from music to film, comedy can be a force for change, debate and community reflection.

But whether the subject matter is canvassed as absurd or serious, by definition comedy must come down to laughter, at ourselves and others.

When comedians adopt self-righteousness they cross from humour to hectoring.

We've seen what happens when the creative cohort begins to take themselves too seriously. It happens often in Hollywood, at award nights especially, when super-rich stars take to the podium with sanctimonious politics and to stand up for the little guy they've never met, or for environmentalism or for or against this or that.

The decision by the Melbourne International Comedy Festival to unceremoniously scrap the Barry Award, named in honour of Barry Humphries, is another example where a politically-correct lens has got things a bit warped. Humphries is a Melbourne icon and probably our best known comedy export.

While elements of his schtick might be seen as passé by progressive comics, it has always cut through to Australians and their willingness to laugh at aspects of our identity.

Every character portrait Humphries has crafted is a parody of that national character — from the 'gigastar' housewife Dame Edna Everage and the satire inflicted on suburbia, to the lecherous and offensive Sir Les Patterson who ridiculed diplomacy, manners, and dry-cleaning. Another famous character, Barry McKenzie, represented all that Australians love and cringe about themselves.

Despite that history of irreverence, it was Humphries' comments a year ago which prompted some of his comedy colleagues to press for his name to be dumped from the award which honours the Melbourne festival's best act of the season.

The Barry Award has been renamed the Melbourne International Comedy Festival Award, with festival director Susan Provan saying it was time to remove gender from the award name, "not least to acknowledge that one third of all past recipients are women".

Transgender comedian Cassie Workman is currently the hot favourite to take out this year's award. But the renaming has split the comic community after criticisms were levelled at Humphries over comments he made during a London interview for The Spectator in July in which he called transgenderism "a fashion — how many different kinds of lavatory can you have? And it's pretty evil when it's preached to children by crazy teachers".

The comment was in response to a question from reviewer Lloyd Evans: "I ask if his biggest crowd-pleaser, Dame Edna Everage, has attracted the attention of trans activists, who are swift to take offence at anything they perceive as transphobic," adding the trans community had seen high levels of self-harm and suicide.

Humphries added: "But I don't think I'm right to pontificate. I'm really an actor."

Indeed, the Barry Award was not bestowed for anything other than being funny. The comedy festival organisers don't seem to get that.

Society does evolve with the times and humour changes with it.

But that doesn't mean that all which went before is suddenly redundant. If we lose the ability to laugh at ourselves we end up nowhere.

Gas must be part of mix

THE ANDREWS Government has been compelled to take a fresh look at onshore gas drilling.

With huge pressure on federal and state governments to reduce energy prices for households and business, the Victorian government has now directed experts to draft proposals which could allow onshore drilling to access new gas deposits.

The Andrews Government moratorium to ban onshore conventional gas exploration expires at the end of June next year.

But, as well as the Morrison Government, Opposition Leader Bill Shorten has called on Victoria to drop its conventional ban now.

"I do think that states need to reconsider their moratoriums on conventional gas exploration," Mr Shorten has said.

As reported in the Herald Sun, the Andrews Government has called for detailed analysis of Otway and Gippsland basin reserves and any mitigation strategies to partner onshore drilling.

Victorian Labor has faced the prospect of a Greens blowback on gas drilling and potential opposition in rural areas. While both sides of politics are against fracking, drilling has gained favour to release new supplies in the wake of the coal-fired Hazelwood plant's demise and stretched energy supply.

The government is seeking advice on measures which could be developed to reassure rural communities if onshore gas exploration is given the green light.

The Otway Basin alone has an estimated 110 petajoules in reserves, a seven-month supply for the entire Victorian market. It is dormant energy which should be accessed.

PROGRESS MUST NOT ERODE OUR EMPATHY

THAT we live in times in which everything from change to reputation to controversy is digitally amplified, with the volume often turned up to 10, has been obvious for years, or at least should have been obvious.

Having been rather vocal, sometimes too vociferously, on this subject for rather a long period, it was surprising that our society's leaders had been so sanguinely supine.

As a result, we have institutionally ingrained some seriously bad behaviour and have dominant digital companies culturally ill-equipped to cope with the contemporary challenges.

For Big Digital, the line of least compliance should not have been the starting point for our journey into the future. Had fewer politicians, and not just in Australia, not been seduced by net narcissism, we may have cognisant communities better able to cope with the e-existential challenges.

That includes, sometimes tragically, the teenagers whose insecurities and vulnerabilities are magnified cruelly in so-called social media — or the seemingly powerful global companies that panic and prevaricate at the first mutterings of the anti-social media mob.

There is no doubt that a mob mentality has taken hold in much of the west and among the most pronounced of the mobs are illiberal liberals, who are roaming the landscape in the seemingly endless, insatiable quest for indignation and umbrage. It is vituperation as virtue.

So here we are on the cusp of truly extraordinary developments in Artificial Intelligence and yet, collectively, our shared level of Emotional Intelligence is plumbing the depths.

There is no doubt that our technical ability to create, to distribute and share information and images and much more will be exponentially enhanced over the coming five years.

But that is the contradiction — while we are creating that capability, we are challenging our capacity for empathy. One example of that trend is the seething secularism that portrays any person of faith, whether an evanescent evangelical or occasional attendee at mass or synagogue or mosque or temple as a nutter, a fruitcake, a devotee of the deviant.

We are going through a strange phase in seeking affirmation through alienation, virtue in victimhood. Like many trends in business, it is a confluence of the personal, the sectoral and the cyclical.

Where are the shared experiences in the contemporary West? Why has the village square shrunk and been subdivided? The verticals in digital run deep and some clearly have the ability to radicalise, whether the neo-fascist or the jihadist.

At least there is a more vigorous debate on these subjects and it's clear that there will be more regulation of companies which have sought to defy definition and avoid a reckoning.

That we in the West are clumsily grappling with these issues as "developed" nations makes one wonder what the impact will be on countries, like China, India and Indonesia, that are combining their industrial revolution with a digital revolution, coping with mass rural-to-urban mobility in the age of the mobile.

So we have the cross-border and Give us vision, thrift and

LAST week I set out the six policy issues that should be priorities when we consider our vote: health, education, occupation, environmental sustainability, integration in a tolerant multicultural society and economic growth.

Today I outline how a federal government should put that policy agenda into practice.

A vision for Australia: Neither of the major parties have told us where they want Australia to be by 2050. Instead we have policies announced to grab a headline and win the daily media battle. How do any of these announcements fit into an Australia in 2050 and what are the leaders' strategies to get us there? How will another change in superannuation, another health announcement, increasing taxes on those earning more than $200,000, or any of the announcements we can expect over the next five weeks, create a stronger, fairer and better Australia? We need a vision, to give us confidence, to inspire us and help us plan our futures.

Defence, foreign affairs and homeland security: A government must represent and defend our national interests in each of these areas professionally, and transparently, without any political gamesmanship.

We are undermanned in defence. If you put our entire armed forces in the MCG it would be barely half full — and I worry that procurement of military hardware is corrupted by the political process. We have been well served by successive governments in foreign affairs but should never forget we are not major players on the world stage. But we can still make a meaningful contribution to world events.

Homeland security is becoming increasingly important and political parties must articulate policies of tolerance and compassion, not accept extreme views and ensure policies for entry to Australia which have served us well for decades are observed.

A culture of success and growth: The federal government can influence community culture but it is easy to throw money at a cause in pursuit of electoral success, funding it by increasing taxes. But you do not strengthen those with less by weakening the strong.

Governments should be encouraging entrepreneurship in medical science, agriculture,

TOWARDS ZERO	ROAD DEATHS THIS YEAR	ROAD DEATHS LAST YEAR
Victorian deaths in 2019, compared with the same day last year we have the crass-border, the seamless spread of witless nonsense, delivered digitally, globally, endlessly, daily.

We must ask what is the provenance of digital drivel and why it was so successfully spawned in the early days of internet “idealism”?

In essence, it was because the anarchic architects believed that open-source code 010101 should be complemented by open-source content — the only problem is that there actually is a hierarchy of content and of news, the fact-based and the fantasy-based, the profound and the profane, the veracious and the vacuous. In this e-emptiness, there is a craving for credibility and a quotidian questioning.

There should be scepticism about elites, and a healthy scepticism is I presume, I hope, still part of the Australian character. But the question we must ask is who are the elites, who is the establishment?

Australia famously dealt with a tyranny of distance, now the world has a tyranny of the distinguished, a smug, sneering elite that derides popular concerns as “populism” and whose self-image is fuelled by an abiding sense of absolute superiority.

This is the Sir Keith Murdoch Oration but it would be remiss to ignore what Rupert Murdoch has done for the media and for our country and for many other countries.

To see Rupert up close each day, to witness the restless curiosity, the endless energy and a genuine humility is in such stark and breathtaking contrast to the ill-informed institutional critiques.

This evening is indeed about inheritance. About the inherited responsibilities we all have, to our land, our place, our people, our planet.

We are custodians and as custodians we must be conscious of consequence and context. We in this room are, almost without exception, people of privilege and so what will we do with that prestige, that position, that power, that possibility? Yasunari Kawabata, the first Japanese to win a Nobel prize for literature, wrote: “Time flows in the same way for all human beings; every human being flows through time in a different way.” How will we flow through time? How will we make the most of our time?

THIS IS AN EDITED EXTRA OF THE KEITH MURDOCH ORATION DELIVERED BY ROBERT THOMSON, CEO OF NEWS CORP, AT THE STATE LIBRARY LAST NIGHT.

the consistency we need manufacturing, the arts, technology and so on. Australia is in the grip of a credit squeeze. If a family's biggest asset — their home — is falling in value, the last thing we need is a government that adds to economic hardship.

We need a government that can lift and inspire one with bold vision, plain speaking advocacy, and progressive policies that encourage us to succeed and rewards us for it.

Review and dump some responsibilities: Governments are too cumbersome. For instance, health policy should be a federal matter where deliverables are contracted out to the states. Why? Because we have a substantial national health tax, the Medicare levy. On the other hand, Canberra should get out of education and leave it to the states.

It worries me that we try to set educational outcomes from Canberra which are not improving educational standards. I like the idea of competition between the states. Some may put more emphasis on primary and secondary education, others tertiary, another being recognised as the leader in trade education. When you remove competition, the lowest common denominator prevails.

Consistency of policy: I hope the next government will recognise the areas of administration that should not be changed for change's sake and not leave the public more confused and concerned than ever. Take superannuation. Surely it should be a bipartisan issue, with agreement that once a change is made, no further changes can be allowed for 25 years.

Tax rates should be also applied in a way that delivers confidence. In the 1990s when Ireland set out to attract tech companies, it guaranteed a low tax rate for 25 years. That worked and Ireland became the home for most of Europe's IT companies.

We are increasingly struggling with higher costs on things we cannot avoid such as energy prices, health and education costs and such. We need to know that policy changes have a natural life so we can plan within those settings.

As we prepare to vote, we have a right to ask: if we as a country and society are going to do better, we must know where we are heading.

We need less costly and inwardly focused government matched with policy consistency and a clear path ahead.

Right now, neither of the major parties is providing that. It's simply politics as usual.

But let me be clear — I live in hope.

Have a good day.

Barry cut down by comedy's grim reapers

SO, a bunch of painfully unfunny comics attack a comedic genius, Barry Humphries, for being “transphobic” and remove his name from a once prestigious award. Welcome to comedy in 2019 where the laughs are scarce and offence-taking is at epidemic proportions.

The decision by festival organisers to dump Humphries' name from the major prize and rename the Barry Award the Melbourne International Comedy Festival Award illustrates how comedy has lost its way in the age of political correctness.

But why stop at renaming the Barry? In the interests of truth in advertising most modern comics should be renamed activists or smug preachers or, if we're being generous, woke social commentators. Take Hannah Gadsby, a Barry winner, who is “comfortable” not being funny after the success of her comedy special, Nanette which she admits “wasn't funny”. You don't say.

Grievance porn has replaced what was once cutting-edge stand-up in which the purpose of the work was to make the audience laugh. As long as it was funny it didn't matter if the material was offensive, insensitive or just wrong; sometimes the funniest jokes are rooted in tragedy and uncomfortable truths. The late, great Joan Rivers wasn't afraid to include taboo topics in her routine, including jokes about the Palestinian conflict, transgender women, her husband's suicide and caring for a handicapped partner.

“Comedy is to make everybody laugh at everything and deal with things, you idiot,” Rivers shouted at a heckler who was offended by her jokes about Helen Keller.

But now we are in the age of post-comedy comics who would rather bleat about their Trump obsessions, tortured childhoods, the evils of the patriarchy and other assorted grievances. Making the audience laugh is an indulgence when there is perceived injustice to be exposed.

Comics who would rather be funny even if it means pushing boundaries are declared offensive and slandered as misogynists, racists, homophobes, transphobes and/or Islamophobes et al. And, woe betide any comedian who dares commit wrongdoing and expresses a view outside the echo chamber of far Left leaning comics and their band of media enablers.

Humphries is ostensibly being punished for his views on transgender rights. Last year he said: “How many different kinds of lavatory can you have? And it's pretty evil when it's preached to children by crazy teachers.” And, let's not forget Humphries' most famous alter ego, Dame Edna, would be considered “problematic” by hypersensitive whiners.

Gadsby is among the modern comics to lambast Humphries for his worldview. Last year she tweeted: “Barry Humphries loves those who hold power, hates vulnerable minorities and has completely lost the ability to read the room. That's not a comedian, that's an irrelevant, inhumane dick biscuit of the highest order.”

It's adorable when fringe dwellers think they speak for the majority. Humphries' views on transgender toilets and the indoctrination of children in radical gender theory is far more mainstream, and amusing, than anything uttered by Gadsby; but not among the woke cohort of comics appearing at the MICF.

So, it's not surprising that the festival has succumbed to pressure and removed Humphries' name from the award, although it is claiming it's in the name of gender neutrality. Don't for a second allow these humourless malcontents to fool you into thinking that laugh-free comedy is for the greater good or for the benefit of put-upon minorities. There is nothing positive about comedians turning into hectoring hard-Left preachers telling us what to think rather than making us laugh.

HAVE a look at late-night talk shows in the US hosted by once funny comics who now forgo laughs for righteous applause. We can't say we weren't warned. The great Mel Brooks said: “We have become stupidly politically correct, which is the death of comedy.”

Just about every comedy great from Rowan Atkinson and John Cleese to Jerry Seinfeld and Dave Chappelle has warned about the toxic, destructive influence of PC sensitivities on the craft.

Sadly, more and more comics are self-censoring to avoid the wrath of the perpetually outraged which now includes their own colleagues. But the greats continue to churn out material that is funny, insightful and clever. Ricky Gervais, South Park and Book of Mormon creators Trey Parker and Matt Stone and closer to home Chris Lilley ignore the PC police to produce hilarious content.

The last word goes to the wonderful Stephen Fry: “It's now very common to hear people say, ‘I'm rather offended by that’. As if that gives them certain rights. It's actually nothing more than a whine. ‘I find that offensive’. It has no meaning; it has no purpose; it has no reason to be respected as a phrase. ‘I am offended by that.’ Well, so f---ing what?”

The comedy festival's dumping of the Barry Award amuses no one at heraldsun.com.au

BARRY Humphries is Australia's greatest ever comedic talent who is revered across the globe. He has been a top-shelf international star for decades and achieved fame that these precious new Australian "comedians" could only dream of. Many people would agree with Humphries anyway and are sick and tired of being told what they can and can't say.

Patrick

HOW ironic — a man who made his career out of dressing as a woman is accused of being transphobic. The world's going mad.

Leanne

I WONDER how many of these modern-day PC comedians we'll be talking about when they are 85, let alone their ability to fill a theatre with their shows?

Pam

BARRY can think and say whatever he likes, however if there are ramifications, so be it. The comedy festival organisers do not wish to be aligned with his statements, therefore it is their right to change the name of the award.

Debbie

HELLO Possums ... pretty significant vote of No at 94 per cent. Sounds like Lefties taking another beating.

John

IT is a bit sad, as I am a lifelong fan of Barry, but to call gender reassignment "self-mutilation" isn't humour and is always going to offend reasonable people.

Kathryn

BARRY is a legend and it is the festival's loss.

Colin

ONE of Melbourne's greatest talents cut down for truth speak.

Allan

Barry Humphries' namesake, the Barry Award, was initiated in 2000.

HOW dare he have an opinion that differs from the PC rhetoric and then to actually speak out about it in public. My god, lynch him quickly before others start to think for themselves.

Margaret

I HAVE enjoyed Humphries from his early days in the '60s and '70s. He is a remarkable comedian and has done more for that industry than any other Australian.

Philip

JERRY Seinfeld and Rowan Atkinson warned about this insanity — that comedy is dead to political incorrectness.

Vinnie

PEOPLE go to shows to be entertained and have a laugh, not to be lectured.

Bev

SHOULD rename it after Paul Hogan, and call it the Hogies.

Jason

I DOUBT Barry gives a toss, he doesn't need glory from a bunch of never weres.

Geoffrey

HOPEFULLY this will give him more fodder for his very sharp wit.

Shari

P

BARRY Humphries is the only one of the comedians I have heard of.

Ross

LET'S ask Les Patterson what he thinks of this outrage.

Lee

GLAD he didn't lampoon vegans. They'd burn him at the steak.

Adrian

Lift up our voices

WHEN did it become wrong to have a different opinion to someone else? When did we lose the ability to "agree to disagree"?

Why are there segments of the community that play the victim card if everyone doesn't agree with them? Why does the media hound people for having a different opinion to small sections of the community?

We are always being told about diversity and inclusiveness but what that really means is that you must see things our way or we will vilify, condemn and hound any dissenting voices into silence.

Everyone has a right to live how they want to as long as it is lawful and doesn't hurt another.

Does this mean we always have to agree on all topics? Of course not. At the moment, though, our voices are being silenced into submission.

At Easter time, it is important for many to celebrate the gift of the atonement and resurrection of Jesus Christ. For us to celebrate the hope of eternal life He brings. His greatest commandments are to love God and to treat each other as we would like to be treated.

He doesn't say we must agree on everything, just be respectful and kind and tolerant towards others. We don't need thought police telling us what to think.

Angela Donald, Box Hill

LEX Neander (50/50, Apr 16) is right about political leaders.

Of John Howard, he says that "it is better to be respected than liked" ... and (Howard) was "respected for sticking to his beliefs and principles more than he was liked".

Surely this is the absolute essence of a political leader.

I am intrigued that Lex is not prepared to cut Bill Shorten the same slack.

As with John Howard, Bill Shorten heads up a cohesive, unified team with the leader being "the fall guy" who has to "sell" party policies.

When is the media going to stop peddling tiresome character assassinations, the personality politics that is the ugliest feature of political campaigns?

Noel Butterfield, Montmorency

Title claim falls short

BILL Shorten's wife Chloe has said: "My husband is a feminist".

How does this square with his direct and brutal involvement in the "bumping off" of a feminist Labor prime minister?

Coke Tomyn, Camberwell

Ruling by fractions

WITH regard to preferential voting, I would remind H. Donovan (YS, Apr 15) and Graham Fisher (YS, Apr 12) that if there are three candidates for a seat, "the candidate with the most votes" may have only 31 per cent of the total.

Further, the minimum percentage of the vote required to win falls as the number of candidates increases, so that 11 per cent of the vote may be enough to elect a member if there are 10 candidates, even if 89 per cent of the electors prefer any one of the others.

Democracy at work?

Albert Riley, Mornington

Tax cuts needed now

SO where's the great Coalition tax gift? We are supposed to be playing "happy clappy" with tax cuts (and pretty miserable at that, considering bracket creep) in five years.

What a joke.

The pensioners, battlers and those worse off still don't crack a mention from either party.

Up the ante so that at least many will be able to put food on the table and turn on the lights at home (if they have one). This is just as or more important than anything else.

Whoever does this will get my vote.

Ian Anderson, Surrey Hills

Go quietly, Malcolm

ISN'T it time that Malcolm Turnbull took his bat and went home? He is behaving like a spoiled primary school pupil who realised he wasn't the teacher's pet.

He has never forgiven Tony Abbott for beating him in the republican debate in 2000. Then Abbott beat him in the leadership challenge, when the Liberals were in Opposition.

Then Abbott led the Liberal/National Party to an election win with a 17-seat majority.

Turnbull then stabbed him in the back, went to an election and lost 17 seats.

If the Nationals hadn't gained a seat he would have lost government.

Then after more than 30 bad polls, he called a leadership challenge and he lost.

It is time Mr Turnbull moved on.

Brendan Prendergast, Bayswater

Rhetoric powers on

IT'S funny how only a couple of weeks ago it took 20-30 minutes for a fast, partial recharge of an electric car. Supporters now say it is eight minutes.

By the time the election arrives, you will probably only need to drive past a power point.

Kerry Foley, Launceston, Tas

Full steam backwards

THERE'S a simple solution to the concerns our conservative voters have about issues like the electric car takeover and losses in the mining sector.

Let's bring back coal-fired steam-driven cars and utes. It worked all right for our steam trains.

DANCE 1800-DOOF

There's been some tumult in the Red Bull camp, similar to the effect the syrupy stuff has on your stomach. The Red Bull Music Academy is being wound up (sad-face emoji) but they're still putting on cranking events with top selectors (tongue out and winking emoji). The inaugural 1800-DOOF event sees London DJ Lone top the bill of the split-level club adventure, ready to spin booty bass, hip-house, soul and techno. The local jocks are en pointe, led by certified living legend DJ J'nett (above) B2B with Rambl and flanked by Toni Yotzi (who stomped it out hard at Pitch Festival) Moopie and more. This week everybody's talking about... GAME OF THRONES starring

CUNNINGHAM

Irish actor Liam Cunningham marvels at the epic ensemble show that elevated his career, writes Kerry Parnell

After three decades in the business, actor Liam Cunningham says he feels like he has "been outed", thanks to Game of Thrones, saying the TV show turned him from "a strolling player" to a "TV star".

Cunningham, who plays Ser Davos Seaworth in the epic drama series, says the real star of Game of Thrones is the wildly popular show itself.

"It's not any one person, it's a beautiful ensemble. I have never been in a show where I felt I am a participant in it along with the audience. Everyone was at the top of their game, this was a perfect storm coming together, it's impossible to repeat. These things are magical," he says.

"It was very strange hanging up the costume on the last day. I had a good look at my costume before I walked away from my very small trailer."

The 57-year-old, who lives in Dublin — not far from where many of GoT's most famous scenes were filmed — says his wife and three kids are fans.

"After the controversial Sansa rape, my daughter Ellen stood up and was very, very f---ing annoyed about it. She went, 'That's it, I am never watching this show again', and as she stormed towards the door, just before she slammed it, I went, 'Yes you will'."

"And when you see this wonderful mature Sansa coming, that they didn't beat her, didn't break her, in fact she got strength from that horrible thing, she got clever, it celebrated her strength of character."

"The same when Shireen was burnt — you are going, 'You are burning children on television!' It's horrific, but you see the faces of Stanis and his wife and the results of it and it's immaculate, it's beautiful storytelling."

Cunningham is loud, funny and swears liberally.

Despite already having appeared in major productions such as Centurion, Clash of the Titans and The Guard, he adored his time on Game of Thrones. When he read the script revealing the burning of Shireen in Season 5, he was devastated. "I remember reading that and going f---ing hell, because I am thinking about Kerry (Ingram). Some of the most wonderful scenes I had were with Kerry. My character obviously didn't want her to go, I didn't want her to go."

Ser Davos is one of the few likeable characters in the series.

"He is necessary, he is almost a device, because there is so much moral greyness. In a way I think he represents the audience," he says.

Filming was notoriously hard, especially the battle scenes. "The Battle of the Bastards (Season 6) was 25 days for a 20-minute sequence, I think. They are a pain in the a--e to shoot. And the more pain in the a--e the better they look."

"I was talking to Kit Harington (Jon Snow) on day one as we approached the battlefield and said the one thing we are going to need here is a sense of humour. The only way to get through it is to have a laugh at your fellow actors and them to have laugh at the misery you are going through or otherwise it's really depressing.

"It is cold, it's wet, you're slipping, there's horses in mud, there's guys running past you with swords. It's unpleasant to shoot."

He says he will be relieved when the final season airs.

"I will be more than happy when the last episode goes out — I am sick of keeping secrets, I am no good at them, I would be terrible in the CIA."

"When I am in a bar, people say, 'Come on, give us something', and whenever I have a couple of drinks in me I go, 'OK I'll tell you', and they shout, 'No don't'."

"They want to know but they don't want to know. The secrecy is because the surprises are wonderful and we are trying to not show how the magic trick worked."

"If it gets out, the moment is spent. We want them to sit on their sofas and go, 'did you see that!' It's magnificent, it's event television, it's beautiful."

COVER STORY

Keeping it real

New Housewife
Denise Richards is trying to have fun and be a good
Siobhan Duck

Drama doesn't faze Denise Richards. In fact the former Bond girl knew that was exactly what she would be getting when she stepped into the reality TV spotlight as a new cast member of The Real Housewives of Beverly Hills.

As the ex-wife of Hollywood bad-boy Charlie Sheen, Richards has spent almost two decades pursued by paparazzi and with her often tumultuous private life splashed across the tabloids.

"When you are in the public eye you open yourself up to criticism. And I have attracted my fair share of criticism over the years," she laughs.

"I try not to read the [American] tabloids. And I have tried to protect my girls from a lot of what has gone on with their dad but there's limits in what you can do."

The actor also has experience with the reality TV fish bowl, having starred in her own short-lived reality show, Denise Richards: It's Complicated, back in 2008.

At the time, things were still messy with Sheen and he tried to stop their children from being part of her show. When his legal proceedings to halt filming failed, Sheen then urged his many fans to boycott the program instead.

The outspoken actor appears to have no such reservations this time around and has even appeared on this season via speaker phone.

Richards said it was her close friend Lisa Rinna who encouraged her to join the cast this season. And while the franchise is famous for its catty antics and all-out brawls, Richards has found all the women to be supportive.

"I am in a much different place in my life now," the star says during a whirlwind tour of Australia.

"Back then [during her own show] I was going through a divorce, my mom had just died and my children were still so young. Now I am a mom of three and I am happily remarried."

Richards' recent wedding to energy healer Aaron Phypers was captured for the show.

"I didn't put any restrictions on what they could show," she says. "If you are doing a reality show then you need to commit to sharing your life."

"It would have been dishonest not to film it because that was what was going on in our lives at the time. If we hadn't been filming the show when we were getting married then we would have kept it private."

Richards, 48, met Phypers, who was previously married to Desperate Housewives actor Nicollette Sheridan, through his state-of-the-art healing centre in Beverly Hills.

A refreshingly candid Richards joked to her Housewives co-stars during a recent episode that she and Phypers "had sex in one of his rooms and had been inseparable ever since". She also left her co-stars Kyle Richards (no relation) and Lisa Vanderpump gobsmacked when she regaled them with intimate details about the physical attributes that had first attracted her to Phypers.

But when questioned about what had really made her realise that Phypers was the man for her, Richards says it was simply the fact that he had bonded so well with her family.

While most Hollywood couples typically spend months, even years, planning every minute detail of their impending nuptials, Richards and Phypers got hitched within days of getting engaged.

"I would highly recommend it," she says of her quick trip up the aisle.

"IF YOU ARE DOING A REALITY SHOW THEN YOU NEED TO COMMIT TO SHARING YOUR LIFE"

She joked of asking Sheen to the big day: "Even if he did bring a prostitute as his date, I wouldn't care. It's just, it is what it is."

Despite their acrimonious past, Richards has been open about her desire to include her ex in any family event for the sake of their girls.

It is clear Richards is a doting albeit occasionally strict mother. She recently had security cameras installed at her home so she could make sure the now-teenage Sam and Lola didn't follow in her footsteps and try to sneak out at night.

Richards also concedes that as the third generation of Hollywood royalty, the girls' childhood is completely different to the one she had growing up in small-town Illinois.

"I try to be a good parent and teach them about consequences," she says.

"They are growing up very differently to me but we are still a family. Family has always been very important to me."

Richards says that if her daughters expressed interest in going into the family trade then she would support them in following their dreams, just as her parents did for her when she decided to pursue a career in modelling and later acting.

Long before she was a Housewife, Richards made her mark with a series of iconic roles that often focused on her overt sex appeal. Who could forget that steamy swimming pool snog with co-star Neve Campbell in Wild Things? Or her role as the hotpants-clad nuclear scientist, Dr Christmas Jones, in the The World Is Not Enough? The one-time Playboy cover girl isn't afraid to poke fun at her image as a sex kitten either — most memorably as Ross's cousin in Friends and American hot girl in Love Actually.

Yet Richards says it is her work as a Housewife that is now getting her the most attention. Not that she thinks of it as work.

"There are no scripts to learn," she says. "I'm just living my life and having fun with it."

CHRISSY METZ FINDS HER FAITH HAS BEEN REWARDED IN TV AND FILM ROLES.

Career soars on a wing and a prayer

Meeting the mother of a boy who overcame the odds brought it all home for Chrissy Metz whose mum had made a similar recovery, writes Michele Manelis

Chrissy Metz thinks she's the perfect person to star in a movie about miracles because she believes she is one.

The plus-sized star of the hit US TV show This Is Us has had an unlikely rise to stardom in body-conscious Hollywood and still can't believe how much she has achieved, particularly ahead of her first lead film role in the drama Breakthrough.

"On paper, it doesn't quite make sense that I'm sitting in this room talking to you about a lead role in a feature film, coming off an incredible television show," she says.

"I didn't go to art school, I didn't have 10 years of technical training, and of course, being plus size. I'm grateful, and I still can't wrap my head around it."

Based on a true story, Breakthrough stars Metz as Joyce Smith, mother of a 14-year-old boy, John, who was trapped underneath a frozen lake for 15 minutes. Paramedics tried to resuscitate the boy for an hour before proclaiming him dead. When his mother started praying, John's heart began to beat.

"I heard about the story when it was in the news almost four years ago," Metz recalls.

"I generally don't like to watch the news because it's mostly depressing, but I was like, 'What is this? This is incredible!'"

The faith-based story clearly resonated with Metz whose own faith was called on in 2017, when she and her mother were getting ready to go to the Emmy Awards. Suddenly, her mother Denise fell to the ground, suffering a massive stroke.

"Once we got to the hospital, I said to her doctor, 'You don't know my mum, and if you don't speak positive thoughts around my mum, then you don't belong in her room,'" she says. "And ironically, those words were almost verbatim what Joyce said to John's doctors. So, when I read the script, I realised that I had to be somehow affiliated and a part of this story."

Her mother was subsequently given a grim prognosis.

"OBVIOUSLY WE KNOW I'M A VERY EMOTIONAL GIRL"

"The doctor said that if my mum made it through the night, she'd never be able to walk again." She pauses. "And so the only thing I could do was pray, stay positive and send her love, light and healing thoughts." It seems her prayers were heard and her mother made a full recovery.

Unsurprisingly, meeting the real Joyce Smith was a highly emotional experience.

"It was so surreal. Instantly once we saw each other, she started welling up and I started tearing up. I was like, 'Oh, this is so overwhelming'. We talked about how amazing it was that her and John's story is being told, and that it inspires so many people and brings hope to their lives. We chatted like old friends. There were a lot of similarities between us. We were both singers in a band, and of course both being from the South and coming from a big family."

Metz admits that her size and background made it difficult to find gainful employment.

"This business is a business of rejection," she says with a laugh. "My therapist said, 'You know that you chose that, right?'"

Metz grew up in Florida and moved to LA to pursue a career in acting.

"I wanted to quit a couple times but I'd call up my mum and she'd say, 'Okay, you can either be miserable here in Florida or you can be miserable in LA pursuing your career'.

"And I was like, 'Oh, I guess I'll stay in LA'. I remembered something Harrison Ford once said, 'You just have to stand in line long enough'. That was frustrating to me because at some point you think, 'Am I delusional? Am I crazy?'"

Metz eventually landed a few appearances in shows such as My Name Is Earl, and American Horror Story: Freak Show. Eventually she found herself the right fit to play Kay Pearson in This Is Us, perhaps because she's as empathetic off-screen as on.

"Obviously we know I'm a very emotional girl. I stay very vulnerable and wear my heart on my sleeve because I think we don't do that enough."

The award-winning actor says she thoroughly enjoys her interactions with fans.

"I just was asked to propose to a gentleman's girlfriend for him on video," she laughs.

"And last week I was on a flight to New York and a woman's 10-year-old son came up to me, and he was like, 'Oh gosh, Chrissy!' And I'm thinking first of all, he is 10 years old, how does he know who I am? But that happens all the time, because the demographic is so large. So this boy said to me, 'I love you and you really inspire me'."

"Then his mum told me that he was on his way to an eating disorder clinic. She said to me, 'What you have done for him is to accept himself for who he is.'" She smiles. "And then, of course, there I am, sobbing on the plane!" she roars. "But that was so beautiful. That's why I think we are here, to help each other through this thing called life."

Clearly Metz doesn't take her success for granted. "I pray every day, probably multiple times a day. I meditate, I do a gratitude list," she says. "It's not so much that I go to church. For me, my spiritual practices are about praying and staying grounded."

This Is Us fans know to keep a box of tissues at the ready, and Season 3 was certainly no exception to the rule. But according to Metz, it's not only audiences who are reduced to a puddle of tears. So who cries most on set?

"That would be me."

WATCH Breakthrough opens tomorrow.

COMIC FEELING FULLY SICK

CANADIAN comedian DeAnne Smith has an unlikely fan: Happy Gilmore. Her Netflix special Gentlemen Elf hit screens on January 1 and the head of Netflix Comedy Robbie Prawl called her up a week later.

"I told him I was getting a lot of really nice messages from people who were discovering me for the first time. He told me Adam Sandler had mentioned my show to him by name as one he really enjoyed," Smith says, equally chuffed and taken aback.

"I never knew my sort of stuff would resonate with Sandler."

Apart from impressing Billy Madison, Smith has been charming local audiences since debuting at Melbourne International Comedy Festival in 2011. She was nominated for the Barry Award for most outstanding show in her first year and packed crowds in each night, doing loads of improvised crowd work including with an 85-year-old lady, Dawn.

This year's show, Epiphany, sees her return to risky, synapses-must-be-firing audience interaction. So far it's produced spectacular results. "We had eight people all do their best animal noises in order. It was funny because at first there wasn't much going on, it was the most reluctant crowd I'd had ...then a girl announced she was the Rooster

Call champion of Tambo Races." Your loyal scribe was there and can confirm it was spot on. The same night a camp fellow appeared at the back of the room and declared: "I can do a pigeon noise."

Smith nearly has an embolism. "That's right, it's like that guy was never there until he spoke up, that was so weird; amazing."

39-year-old Smith has a clear aim before each set.

"I want the audience to feel after the show like what we were all just a part of was the only time that'll ever happen."

There's a nicely-weighted body positive message to Epiphany, a pleasing after effect of comedy's post-Nanette era.

"Me and my girlfriend are always joking around at home what a sick rack I have," she says. "Personally the show is still evolving, it's brand new. The weird focus on boobs is a superficial attempt at reconciling what I feel about my body. There's more potential for it in future runs of the show."

Smith is curious the word "sick" originated in Australia, "probably though your surfie culture." The word "hideous" was briefly used in the early '90s as one step up from sick, when something truly incredible.

"I'm definitely stealing that and taking it back to Canada."

(BARELY DRESSED/RC)

A little bit of heartbreak never hurt anyone.

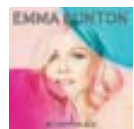

Ribeiro lets these 12 songs tumble out of her in time with her tears. She sums up the state of play in Vignette 2 - Cry Baby. "Take myself to the lonely hearts theatre, watching sad film all the time, sit down in the front row with me yes myself and I." Never too glum to strum, Ribeiro continues her hot run of sly, noir folk albums that will live on after we all turn to dust. Dylan, Stranger and Young Love will get at you. /MIKEY CAHILL

First we're bypassed — again — on a Spice Girls tour, now

Beige Spice not so much covers but suffocates an Oz dance classic on her new solo album. Here Madison Avenue's Don't Call Me Baby cops a Latin-lite makeunder and total attitude bypass. It's symptomatic of this album's gaping 'meh' factor. Baby covers Norah Jones (of course) and Here Comes the Sun while Robbie Williams duets on the Spice's 2 Become 1 for Smooth FM listeners. Best is You're All I Need to Get By with hubby Jade Jones — actual soul. Pleasant. /CA

Welcome to the world of Lizzo

CAMERON ADAMS

(WARNER)

AMERICAN singer Lizzo runs on positivity.

She even managed to power through her first Coachella set last weekend when power cuts saw her sound repeatedly drop out.

No music? No worries. Keep singing and work the crowd.

That attitude has seen the world belatedly discover the 30 year old: this is her third album.

It's also a thoroughly 2019 record — swift and genreless.

First single Juice introduced Lizzo (to those poor souls who hadn't heard Good as Hell) with a 80s fun and funk throwback part Rick James, part Sheila E.

Radio were still digesting Juice when Lizzo dropped Cuz I Love You — a theatrical rock mini-epic (Aretha meets Rocky Horror meets Lady Gaga) where you just know Lizzo left the vocal booth totally spent.

Third single Tempo with uber guest Missy Elliott fired up rump-shaking bass, and showcased Lizzo's vocal flow.

The album continues to pinball between styles in style.

Like a Girl is the female empowerment lyric you've heard from endless pop princesses, but it actually sounds authentic from Lizzo.

See also self-love ode Soulmate ("I know how to love me") while Jerome serves life lessons to modern men over modern Motown: "2am photos with smiles and hearts ain't the way to my juicy parts".

Cry Baby reminds you she worked with Prince — those layered vocal harmonies and brooding rock guitars suit her as well as any modern R&B beats.

In just over 30 minutes Lizzo does the most here, from vocal riffing alongside the guitars in Better in Color to firing up her trademark flute (it's named Sasha and has its own Instagram page) on the gospel meets house Heaven Help Me.

Lizzo already loves herself. Now it's your turn to fall in love with her. It won't take too long.

VERDICT 100% Lizzo

with LEIGH PAATSCH

The power play CURSE MOVIES

With cinemas tomorrow hosting the blight of The Curse of the Weeping Woman, here are five more cursed movies to stream up some terrifying bad luck at home ...

THE RING (2002)
GOOGLE, ITUNES

Solidly spooky adaptation of a fantastic Japanese chiller from 1997. Naomi Watts plays a reporter investigating the biggest story of her career. Rumours are circulating of teenage girls who view a weird video clip, followed by a phone call accurately predicting that they will die in one week's time. After following a up a few leads, Rachel (doh!) takes a fateful squiz at the footage.

ANNABELLE (2014)

Annabelle is a creepy-looking vintage doll ruining the lives of anyone unlucky enough to own her. A basic origin story is set in 1971, when Annabelle was yet to turn pro as a full-on freaker-outer of men, women and children. Especially children. Generates a respectable number of scares once the self-arranging furniture and self-slamming doors get going.

TRUTH OR DARE (2017)

After a holiday in Mexico, a group of young friends bring home a fatal curse linked to the famous game mentioned in the title. Anyone who does not spill the beans or take a chance when requested can expect to die a gruesome instant death. Moments where the curse strikes are unintentionally amusing: a victim's head will warp and change shape like a bad Snapchat filter has just been applied.

Angelina Jolie plays the title character, a fairy warrior princess looking for revenge on the soldier king who was once her boyfriend. Having cast an unbreakable curse on an innocent young princess (Elle Fanning), Maleficent must confront the severity of her actions as the king's legions come after her people. Delivers the goods if you forgive a slapdash start.

WALLACE AND GROMIT: THE CURSE OF THE WERE-RABBIT (2005)

Wallace and Gromit's first feature-length outing remains a clay-mation classic. On the eve of the annual Giant Vegetable Growing Competition, a King Kong-sized rabbit is stomping all over the best gardens in the village. Before the menace is dealt with, there are countless complications, almost all of which involve technical problems with the duo's malfunctioning inventions.

drama

Movies as intelligent, challenging and almost flawlessly realised as this astonishing contemporary drama are mighty thin on the ground these days. Therefore I do recommend that anyone scouring the streaming platforms for top-shelf fare should track down First Reformed as soon as possible. The movie draws an incredible amount of raw power from two sources. The first is a career-best performance from Ethan Hawke as Ernst Toller, a small-town priest and former Army chaplain experiencing a crisis of faith that will either be the making or the breaking of him. Since losing his son in a terrorist ambush in Iraq, Toller has lost his way as a spiritual mentor to his dwindling church community. The arrival of a troubled young man who is an extreme environmental activist gives Toller a chance to snap out of his existential funk. Matching Hawke's faultless display is the word-perfect writing and direction of veteran filmmaker Paul Schrader, mining the same rich vein of form that spawned his screenplays for Taxi Driver and Raging Bull.

HOW TO TRAIN YOUR DRAGON: THE HIDDEN WORLD (PG)

Those that have grown to love (or have loved growing up with) the stirring adventures of the indefatigable Viking leader Hiccup and his trusty dragon offsideer Toothless will not hear a bad word against the genial fantasy-based series. The same winning blend of endearment and excitement is once again to the fore in this quality final instalment. The Isle of Berk — over which Hiccup (voiced by Jay Baruchel) rules in place of his late father — is getting way overcrowded. Against the advice of several elders, Hiccup tries to —locate a fabled hidden realm his dad once mentioned, which would be perfect for his plans for expansion.

documentary

One of the best docs of 2018. Robert Shafran, Edward Galland and David Kellman were born identical triplets, only to be adopted out to various families by a young mother not capable of raising them. Somehow, the brothers accidentally found one another as adults, and from that moment on, were inseparable. The world's media couldn't get enough of the yarn. All of this alone would make for a cracking doco. But there is more. So much more. The upbeat coincidence of the siblings' chance reunion is gradually overshadowed by the possibility there was nothing coincidental about their separation at birth. Amazing stuff.

drama

Sometimes you don't need absolute power to corrupt absolutely. Just ask schoolteacher Maria Drazdechová (played by Zuzana Mauréry), the clinically unscrupulous lead character of a compelling drama set in Communist-run Czechoslovakia in the early 1980s. Intimidated parents know their children will only get good grades if they stay on the good side of Maria. Sometimes a few bags of groceries will seal the deal. On other occasions, Maria may require some repairs on her home, or perhaps some goods smuggled out of the country. Like Maria herself, The Teacher can be wryly amusing when it wants to be, and suddenly turn on you in a way you didn't see coming.

As we approach Good Friday, there's a worthy celestial event arising. The Libran moon climbs above the horizon at the end of the week. It's the second full moon to arrive in Libra, thus making it an astrological full blue moon – a rare and powerful event. It suggests that an important milestone can be achieved. The illumination it brings, plus the fulfilment it promises, will help us to realise ambitious goals for ourselves and in relationships too. It's a potent portent for the holiday season that lies ahead.

ARIES MAR 21-APR 20

With so much going on in your life, could you be pushing yourself dangerously close to the limit of your abilities? When you're sailing so close to the wind, will taking on "just one more thing" be enough to make you fly out of control? The answer is a definitive "No". It's true that you're wrestling with a problem that feels a bit as if it might be too much to handle. But, in the build up to the astrological blue moon, it's easy to attribute more drama to a situation than it merits. What seems big now, will soon appear small. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

TAURUS APR 21 - MAY 21

Carole King caught the spirit of intimacy and comradeship in her song You've Got a Friend. It's almost impossible to analyse the ingredients that make friendship work; and perfectly okay to accept that you feel good in the company of one person, and edgy if you spend too much time with another. If you feel in need of a companion who understands your current situation without you having to explain everything, the approaching astrological blue moon brings the person you need. All you have to do is call. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

GEMINI MAY 22-JUN 22

There are few more irritating things than being told a truism after you've made a mistake: "You didn't think that one through, did you?" "You're going to have to face the facts now." As if you hadn't worked it out for yourself. Yet right now, the reproachful voice isn't coming from anyone else's lips; it's you giving yourself a hard time. Yes, there are some facts to face. Your attempts at solving a problem might not have worked as well as you'd hoped. But you tried, and you learned. Don't give up. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

CANCER JUN 23-JUL 23

You look calm on the surface, but that doesn't tell the real story. Something has got under your skin. And while you have refrained from stamping your feet, your feelings are leaking out in little bursts of impatience and short-tempered responses to simple questions. You are, of course, feeling extra sensitive during the approach to the astrological blue moon. If you look again at what has happened, you can find a simple way to heal any hurt with gentle humour. Don't forget your light-hearted side. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

LEO JUL 24-AUG 23

"I don't wanna go to school / I just wanna break the rules..." This lyric from pop singer Charli XCX sums up the teenage desire for freedom. It also hints at the potential these next few days hold for you, when you embrace the opportunities they present. The astrological blue moon energises you and frees you from an emotional tie. The sense of liberation allows you to relax and take some time to yourself. The extra good news is that no one's feelings will be injured as you enjoy your independence. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

VIRGO AUG 24-SEP 23

If you want something to be exactly right, that's fine – just remember that it will take time, and a supply of patience. You'll have to work hard if you want to reach such a high standard. Depending on what you're trying to achieve, exasperation might be a more likely outcome than contentment. Which doesn't mean you should abandon your attempts to put things right. But you don't need to become stressed striving for an impossible goal. Set aside your natural perfectionism; "good enough" is good enough. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

LIBRA SEP 24-OCT 23

When we're experiencing a moment of high emotion it's hard to imagine being in any other state of mind. That goes for the good times and the bad. When we're feeling happy, for a short while it seems as if life will be like that forever. And when we're sad? Well, that's the thing. Emotions know no future and no past. They eclipse logic and reason. If you're feeling as if your current mood may never change, prepare for the astrological blue moon. Get ready to be uplifted, inspired and excited. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

SCORPIO OCT 24-NOV 22

Your nerves are on edge. You keep experiencing situations that make little sense and leave you with a feeling of dislocation. Each time you try to get a grip on what's going on, the situation turns to sand in your hands. With other people offering cryptic responses, it's no wonder you've been concerned. But even though you have real reasons to be anxious, these difficulties are passing. The build up to the astrological blue moon highlights what's wrong before it shows the way to make things right. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

SAGITTARIUS NOV 23-DEC 21

"It takes two, baby, / It takes, two, baby, / Me and you." Marvin Gaye's lyrics highlight our basic human needs, but there are many species (including starfish, bees, lizards, sharks, even turkeys), that don't need a partner in order to procreate. As for the rest of us... it seems we need each other for something, at least. And that's not all we need other people for. Problem solving is often better when two heads get together. You could survive today by yourself; but for magic to happen, you need to co-operate. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

CAPRICORN DEC 22-JAN 20

There are lots of accounts from people who have had near-death experiences. They describe travelling towards a bright light, and feeling a deep sense of peace. Were they on their way to meet their maker, before they were brought back to the mortal plane? Some folk believe that we contact the creator simply by allowing the extraordinary natural beauty of the world into our hearts. Rather than preparing for a difficulty, if you feel gratitude for what you have, you'll be able to share joy today. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

AQUARIUS JAN 21-FEB 19

"These dreams go on when I close my eyes... Every moment I'm awake, the further I'm away." Bernie Taupin's lyrics are a reminder that our dreams shed light onto our waking lives. Some psychologists believe that our nightly imaginings are the efforts of our subconscious, helping us make sense of things. When you've lived through a challenging situation, a dream, or a period of wakeful deep thought (or meditation), can provide the key to resolving any lingering issues. For answers now, trust your heart. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

PISCES FEB 20-MAR 20

Where there is a low, there's always a high. It's just that sometimes, the peaks don't appear as swiftly as we'd like. If we navigate through life by optimism alone, we can find ourselves on the wildest of goose chases. That's why it's best to approach challenges with a sense of realism. That's not the same as pessimism. As long as you're sure that you want to stay involved in a project, you can harness the power of the astrological blue moon. There's good reason to think your positive outlook is justified. Use the power of the blue moon to transform your life. Call 1902 222 500.

OVERVIEW: JILLIBY SPIDERMAN (2) and JILLIBY BULLDOG (5) are both prepared by Paddy Lee and on their juvenile season have similar ability. They both come out of the same Terang trial where JILLIBY SPIDERMAN (2) was a comfortable winner. There won't be much between them. LUCKY SERINA (1) drops back in class after running in feature races in her first two starts and RIGONDEAUX (6) dropped out at Maryborough but isn't to be forgotten.

OVERVIEW: LINK TO COLLECT (2) is coming off a good third in a heat of the Eureka when third after sitting without cover behind Okanes Devil and Lady Shiloh. Has good form for this particular race and should lead and if he does will go close. RIGHTEOUSLY (4) struggles to win but is never far away in this type of grade. Naturally the most intriguing runner is the trotter NOVEMBER GUY (7). Yet another New Zealand import for Kate and Andy Gath but hasn't done too much in two metro trot races in Australia to date. Won a trial against the pacers recently at Melton which holds him in good stead but drawn the outside and over an unsuitable sprint distance perhaps? FANCY PEACH (1) draws to follow the speed.

LION HEART (6) has been consistent of late and isn't far away from a win. NIGHT SPIRIT (3) is the other main chance with a last second to the smart Aishabeach at Yarra Glen and also has a second in the Sapling Stakes which naturally is good form. MONSIEUR DELACOUR (5) is a last start second to Pandering and CELESTIA (6) hasn't done anything wrong in two starts.

OVERVIEW: PASSIONS DELIGHT (1) is a New South Wales/Bathurst raider that successfully ventured down to Victoria when beating the smart Masterkova in a race on Gunbower Cup day in November of last year. Since has a fourth in a heat of the prestigious Inter City Pace at Maitland and a four metre fourth in 1:51.6 at Menangle. From the perfect draw should win. MANTHADEE (4) naturally is improving with racing and a good fourth behind Shining Oro and Alpha Charlie in quick time last start. RIVER PATROL (5) was just nabbed on the line last time at Yarra Glen and THE REAL AFFAIR (2) rates next.

OVERVIEW: An open race where WHIZZBANG DAN (3) is coming off a fourth in a strong race last Friday night here behind Parisian Opera and dropping in class from a good draw should get a nice run. MAR PACIFICO (6) has had gait issues but finally put it all together at Cobram last time and won by 25 metres, you'd think that would boost her confidence. OVERVIEW: HEAVEN IN LOCKSLEY (8) has an awkward inside second row draw to contend with but will be winning more races and has a last start second to Shining Oro. With any luck will go close with some speed off the front. MISS VICTORIA (2) is the likely leader and comes off a tough win at Cranbourne. BYE BYE BARBIE (3) drops in class, BARRANJOEY (5) got into trouble in Adelaide last time but good form before that. OVERVIEW: LADY SHAKIRA (4) is a regally bred two-year-old filly on debut here. She is out of Lady Euthenia who was a star juvenile herself and multiple Group 1 winner. Add to that the fact that this girl has trialled most impressively when roaring away at Melton recently and she does look very hard to beat on debut. KEAYANG JACKIE (8) has the race day score on the board after a handy debut win and there looks to be plenty of scope for improvement for her. SOHO GLORIA JANE (1) looks well suited with the barrier draw and wouldn't totally shock while STARSBYTHEBEACH (3), FURIOSA (7) and POLLY PEACHUM (2) are all first four options in what is likely to be an incredible form reference going forward.

OVERVIEW: TIDAL SURGE (2) has been racing much better than his straight form numbers may elude to and he has been doing same in some strong races. He may not have the speed to get involved early but if he can replicate his recent efforts, he'll be hard to hold out late. ROCKING BUGATTI (1) is an obvious forgive last time and made good late ground first-up so if he lands the right run in transit then he's right in this race. ROSIE SAMBROSIE (6) may be able to rip across early and if she does take that option and finds the pegs then she'll be dangerous if she gets a breather. SPRINGA (5) has trialled well at Bendigo recently when winning by a margin while HEIR TO ZANZIBAR (7) is the next best.

OVERVIEW: BETTOROCKBETTOROLL (3) is first-up from a break and while she is a winner of just one from six, each of her runner-up cheques in each of her other five starts have been terrific runs. She gets into this race incredibly well based on her overall form card so even though she'll improve on whatever she does tonight, she must be clearly the horse to beat. EMIJAY (1) is worth putting a line through first-up and she showed a bit in her initial preparation so she's the clear second elect. CORSINI (7) should be ready to peak third-up but the barrier is less than ideal while SAVIOUR CLARE (2) and ELENNA (5) are both trifecta hopes.

Let's drive to catch up

WHILE Australia sleeps, the rest of the world is making cars — electric cars. In the past 12 months, 1.17 million plug-in electric vehicles were sold in China, 386,000 in Europe and 361,000 in the US.

There are more than two million worldwide, with sales increasing by 40 per cent a year. A bit like the uptake of mobile phones not long ago.

Get trains on track

WITH thousands of commuters being stranded in the CBD after a fatal accident in Hampton on Monday evening, why isn't there the option to terminate trains at Elsternwick, as has been done in the past?

Surely this is a basic back-up option in cases such as this.

No sign of Labor wins

MELBURNIANS who expect Labor to create anything less than the present chaos while building the rail and road infrastructure around the city must have short memories.

Does the word myki not mean anything? It took so long to get it anywhere near right that it cost as much as the Burj Khalifa in Dubai, the world's tallest building — $1.5 billion.

And what about the $750 million north-south pipeline that was supposed to bring water from the Goulburn Valley to Melbourne, but has never been used? Nor is it capable of taking water from south to north, if need be.

Let's not forget the Wonthaggi desalination plant, built to provide twice the capacity of a similar plant in Western Australia, but at almost 10 times the price — reportedly $4 billion.

It has hardly seen any service since it was finished either.

Labor's success stories are, I'm afraid, few and far between.

PHIL Craven (YS, Apr 16) is worried about having to share the road with cyclists.

Well, if we extend Phil's argument a little further, we would also get rid of footpaths, because pedestrians "contribute nothing".

Put Aussies in front

WHILE recognising the great sporting comeback of Tiger Woods to win the Masters, the lack of information in our media about four Aussies in the field is frustrating.

Jason Day on 11-under was only two strokes away after suffering debilitating back issues, and the 6-under performance from Adam Scott placed him in the top half of the field.

We need to promote our sportspeople on the world stage as their achievements continue to do us proud.

Jobs key to RBA's next move

Board assesses case for rate shift

THE Reserve Bank says cutting interest rates might be "appropriate" if the unemployment rate rises and inflation remains weak.

The board of the RBA discussed scenarios under which it was likely a cut to the official cash rate below its already historic low was needed, minutes from the central bank's most recent board meeting show.

At its April 2 gathering, the RBA left the cash rate at 1.5 per cent for a record 29th consecutive meeting.

But the board said a lift in the number of people without jobs and stagnant inflation could prompt it to cut the cash rate, minutes from that meeting released yesterday show.

"Members also discussed the scenario where inflation did not move any higher and unemployment trended up, noting that a decrease in the cash rate would likely be appropriate in these circumstances," the minutes say.

"They recognised that the effect on the economy of lower interest rates could be expected to be smaller than in the past, given the high level of household debt and the adjustment that was occurring in housing markets.

"Nevertheless, a lower level of interest rates could still be expected to support the economy through a depreciation of the exchange rate and by reducing required interest payments on borrowing, freeing up cash for other expenditure."

JOHN DAGGE

While the RBA board said economic growth had slowed down markedly in the second half of last year, it noted that the unemployment rate remained low and it expected inflation to rise to the midpoint of its 2 per cent to 3 per cent target.

"Members agreed there was no strong case for a near-term adjustment in monetary policy," the minutes say.

The board also said the likelihood of a higher cash rate in the near term was low.

This marks a turn in policy compared with last month when it saw the risks for rates to move in either direction as more "evenly balanced".

Fresh jobs data is expected tomorrow, while first-quarter inflation data will arrive later in April.

UBS economist George Tharenou said the inflation rate was likely to drop, "shifting the RBA to an easing bias in May and open the door to rate cuts".

ANZ Australia Economics head David Plank noted the "subtle dovish tilt" in the RBA's position on the future direction of interest rates but said it "isn't in any hurry to make a decision".

CommSec chief economist Craig James said it seemed the Reserve Bank expects further progress in reducing unemployment, lifting wages and prices, and therefore lifting consumer spending.

"The Reserve Bank is open to cutting rates, but there is no rush," Mr James said.

The Aussie dollar dropped on the release of the minutes, falling from US71.70c to US71.41c in the space of 45 minutes.

The RBA update came as new numbers from Australia's biggest mortgage aggregator show fewer mortgages were issued in the first three months of the year than at any time in the past six years.

Australian Finance Group said it had lodged 23,049 loans in the quarter, 10 per cent fewer than the previous three months and 15 per cent lower than the same period last year.

The $11.6 billion lent was the lowest quarterly figure since 2014, it said.

"Today's numbers provide stark evidence that the lending environment has significantly deteriorated," AFG chief executive officer David Bailey said.

Blackmores seeks tonic

A CRACKDOWN on personal shoppers sending goods to China is hurting vitamin maker Blackmores, which has launched a strategic review to re-engage consumers in its key overseas market.

Shares in Blackmores slumped yesterday after it booked a double-digit fall in net profit for the first nine months of the financial year and called out a "challenging" operating environment.

The result confirms Blackmores as the highest-profile casualty of China's moves to tame a runaway market of informal importers — known as daigou — which involves personal shoppers sending goods back to the Asian powerhouse economy.

A new China e-commerce law came into force in January requiring Chinese companies that import goods online to be registered with the government, and for certain products to pass through government-linked Customs warehouses where they incur tax.

The global daigou market is worth billions of dollars in sales annually.

Vitamin and infant formula makers have been key local beneficiaries of the sales channel into the world's second biggest economy.

"The third quarter has been challenging for the company," interim chief executive Marcus Blackmore said yesterday.

"However, we firmly believe that this result does not reflect the long-term growth potential of the business."

Net profit for the nine months to March came in at $44 million, down 14 per cent

Sally McManus

ACTU demands action on bank

THE nation's most senior unionist wants Prime Minister Scott Morrison to warn the Commonwealth Bank against undertaking major job cuts.

Australian Council of Trade Unions secretary Sally McManus said it was unacceptable a bank that generated a $9.23 billion full-year profit was considering slashing up to one quarter of its workforce.

"Scott Morrison's silence on this issue shows that he's on the side of the big banks," Ms McManus said.

"This is one of the strongest companies in the country cutting massive amounts of jobs just because it can. This needs to stop."

The call comes after reports surfaced CBA was working on plans to cut more than 10,000 jobs in an effort to rip out $ billion in annual costs. The report, published in The Australian, said CBA was also considering closing up to 300 branches in a network of close to 1000.

The CBA has branded the reports "misleading and unnecessarily alarming".

At the same time, it has noted it needs "to manage costs where it makes sense in terms of efficiency and as part of good business discipline".

COLES LOCKS IN SPC

COLES has signed a new supply deal with SPC that is expected to result in the struggling food manufacturer producing an extra 1.8 million cans of fruit for the supermarket giant's private label range.

Under the deal SPC will provide peaches, pears and apricots in syrup for Coles which previously imported those product lines from South Africa.

RETAIL

The SPC-supplied private label range is already on sale at Coles. The deal for SPC comes as its owner, Coca-Cola Amatil, tries to sell the loss-making business.

Coles brand head Mark Field said the retailer was always looking for opportunities to work with Australian food growers and manufacturers.

CHINESE BURN

A crackdown on personal shoppers sending goods to China has hit vitamin maker Blackmores

The Chinese government has moved to tame informal importers known as daigou

Vitamin and infant formula makers have been key winners from the rise of the daigou trading channel

Shares in Blackmores have slumped by close to 50 per cent since August last year for China's crackdown on the same period a year earlier. The Sydney-based company warned that its second-half profit would be weaker than the first half.

Net profit for the three months to March was $10 million, down 43 per cent on the same period a year ago.

Revenue for the quarter fell 4 per cent to $141 million.

Taking into account sales through Australian retailers, Blackmores estimated sales to Chinese consumers were down about 6 per cent for the quarter.

Given the "evolution" in the way Chinese consumers were accessing its products, the company said it had launched a strategic review on how to maximise its opportunity.

Mr Blackmore, the son of the company's founder, stepped into the chief executive role last month.

Mr Blackmore, who is the largest shareholder in the business, said it would undertake a "major streamlining ... to simplify and improve our processes and structure".

"Targeting $60 million in savings over three years through a business improvement program allows us to continue investing in key strategic initiatives, build our capability and deliver overall margin improvement," he said.

Investment bank Macquarie described the update as weak and said the China division remained challenged.

"Blackmores' China business remains in a state of flux, with sales trends weakening despite stronger recent marketing investment, culminating in a major strategic review," it said in a note to clients.

Shares in Blackmores dropped 1.6 per cent yesterday to close at $88.30.

MARKET WRAP

THE Australian share market closed higher yesterday as banking and healthcare stocks offset a dour day for the energy and telecom sectors.

The benchmark ASX 200 index closed up 26 points, or 0.4 per cent, at 6277.4 points, while the broader All Ordinaries rose 24.4 points, or just under 0.4 per cent, to 6372.3.

The ASX 200 has risen six out of its past seven sessions and its latest close was its second-best level for the year.

"You can't argue with numbers," CMC Markets chief market strategist Michael McCarthy said.

Healthcare was the best-performing sector with Cochlear up 7.9 per cent to $180.76 after the hearing aid company debuted a new implant that doesn't need to be removed during an MRI.

Commonwealth Bank put on 0.7 per cent to $72.69, Westpac 1.3 per cent to $26.41, ANZ 0.6 per cent to $26.41 and National Australia Bank 0.7 per cent to $25.01.

Rio Tinto rose 0.5 per cent to $101.20 despite cutting its 2019 iron ore shipment forecast on disruption caused by a cyclone. Rival BHP fell 0.4 per cent to $39.37.

Takeover target Lynas rose 1 per cent to $2.02 after it reported a 32.5 per cent rise in production of rare earths oxides for the three months to March compared with a year earlier.

Caltex Australia down 2.52 per cent to $26.66 and Beach Energy down 1.4 per cent to $2.12.

The RBA is NOT planning a rate cut

THE Reserve Bank did not weigh an interest-rate cut at its last policy meeting — as one online headline had it yesterday after the release of the minutes of that meeting.

Understanding this is fundamental to understanding the RBA's thinking — and the, true complicated, state of the economy which is really what it is all about.

All about, crucially, not only in determining whether or not and when the RBA might cut — or indeed, hike — but in the "what's it all about, Alfie?" sense.

That's to say, what the RBA is actually trying to achieve: simply, a strong economy with not-too-high but also not-too-low inflation.

More immediately, it's to caution against extrapolating from the RBA "weighed a cut in April" to assuming it would cut in May or all but announce a cut for June after the election.

Let me make three things categorically clear.

First, there is zero chance of a rate cut at the next meeting in two weeks. It would take a shock global cataclysm to alter that — or truly catastrophic jobs figures tomorrow.

Secondly, the RBA was not trying to either "talk itself" into a rate cut or even into seriously considering a rate cut, or trying to wink-wink, nudge-nudge hint that is where it was headed.

Arguably, the most astute observer among the economentariat — with as I have noted before, the best recent record among his peers of RBA rate prediction — Westpac's Bill Evans, went close to falling into this latter trap yesterday.

No, I should emphasise, he did not predict an early cut; what he did do was to draw support from the minutes for his existing prediction of a cut in August and a second cut in November.

And I quote Evans: the minutes "clearly indicate that they are willing to cut the cash rate".

Well, as former US president Bill Clinton famously said about another word, it depends what you mean by the word "willing".

If you think it means that the RBA is anxious to cut and will seize the first excuse or opportunity, the answer is that it is "not willing".

If you think that it means the RBA is willing to cut if the evidence demands that it cut, then, yes, "it's willing".

But that's the first of three critical points. First, none of this is the slightest bit new. RBA governor Philip Lowe has made that crystal clear.

The second key point, though, is that the willingness to cut is still balanced by a similar willingness to hike.

The RBA has said this repeatedly since February. As for example this from Lowe: "The probability that the next move is up and the probability that it is down are more evenly balanced."

It is critically important to understand the RBA has not surreptitiously removed the second part of that statement from its thinking. And certainly not, wink-wink, nudge-nudge style in yesterday's minutes.

INDEED, and this is the absolutely critical third point, the RBA believes — absent that global left-field shock — there is little prospect of a rate move, either way, for the next few months at least.

This also goes to the "third thing" I wanted to make clear: This has got nothing to do with the election.

Lowe hasn't "put away his rate cue" for the duration of the election campaign. He's not waiting for the election to be over so that he can cut at the June meeting.

But again, I have to keep stressing these points — the RBA is always "willing" to pivot and pivot very quickly on a dime if conditions change, and even more if its perception of what policy needs to and can do changes.

Thus it would be "willing" to cut in June (or, much less likely, hike) if needs must. Indeed, it would be entirely "willing" to cut in May, in two weeks, if its perceptions change between now and then, election or no election.

You don't have to believe me on all this; no less a person than Lowe's deputy, Guy Debelle, said it very publicly just last week — after, it's worth noting, the meeting whose minutes got some people all excited yesterday.

Debelle said the RBA's expectation was that we would see decent growth in the economy and so "won't have to get to that point" (of cutting).

The key to any change in that expectation is jobs and jobless data, making tomorrow's release rather important.

AGAIN, hiding in plain sight were the words that sparked all the excitement yesterday: The members discussed the "scenario (my emphasis) where inflation did not move any higher and unemployment trended up".

We would need — these are my words — to see that jobless rate go sharply above 5 per cent.

Then, as the minutes noted, "a decrease in the cash rate would likely be appropriate in these circumstances".

They discussed a scenario not expected reality. But again, if the scenario became reality — Debelle and the RBA think it unlikely — a rate cut would follow.

JOBS, JOBS AND MORE JOBS

ON this jobs point, it was fascinating — and instructive — to note the latest data from the OECD showed the pan-OECD employment rate kicked up to its highest level in years in the closing months of 2018.

The employment rate kicked up in 26 of the 36 OECD countries — that's, all the biggest economies with the exception of China and India.

The most significant increase was in the US; and there the driver was formerly discouraged jobseekers coming back to look for work and getting jobs.

Clearly also the inverse of "one man's (rising) wage is another woman's job" has kicked in as well. Muted wages growth has boosted jobs everywhere.

Never before have so many men and women had jobs; and that is surely "what it is all about Alfie".

Winning pitch for tents

HELEN CARTER

AFTER spending 14 years in the Dutch military where a bed for the night was often a small tent pitched in snow or rain, Leon Juffermans swore to never go camping again.

That was until his wife Sandra became keen for the couple and their four children to enjoy the great outdoors.

Mr Juffermans decided to give it another go — provided there was a shower, toilet, bed and other comforts of home in the tent.

The couple realised they had a winning concept so embarked on a journey that started with establishing a hugely successful glamping business in Europe and led to them moving to Australia to bring their company here and to Asia.

GlamXperience design, makes and sells fully furnished luxury glamping tents, domes, converted shipping containers called glamtainers, and glamping products including rustic furniture, Dutch hot tubs and barbecues.

Glamping, or glamorous camping, was in its infancy in the UK around 2008 when the pair established their business with a neighbour.

Solitude Villas from Clifftop at Hepburn in Hepburn Springs winning Australia's most romantic stay, and wineries in Orange and Bendigo named best new wine hotels experience.

The business has featured in an Italian magazine and National Geographic for creating new standards in sustainable luxury accommodation.

A dream is to create a sustainable glamping resort with solar power, hopefully near Bright.

Tips for success include choosing quality, being innovative and seeking good business partnerships.

"The concept is thousands of years old from Bedouin culture in North Africa and British explorers brought their mansions to safari tents in Africa," Mr Juffermans said.

"We started importing tents from India but quality was poor so we decided to create the 'Mercedes among the safari tents' by using PVC from Germany, canvas from the Netherlands and wood from Scandinavia.

"Quality always wins and it took off like crazy in Europe. Within five years we were the European market leader, jumping from 50 tents in 2009 to more than 1000 annually."

By 2015 the European market was competitive and the couple was up for a new challenge.

"We wanted to go somewhere to embark on special projects and chose Australia because it's the outdoor country of the world and Melbourne because it has a European vibe and we knew people would like the concept," Mr Juffermans said.

"The trend now is holistic, people want a great experience from the website to the shower, it's all about attention to detail, something you haven't got at home, fuel for the mind, body and soul."

They set up a factory, now in Pakenham, established a website and hit social media.

Holiday parks in the Grampians and Anglesea gave them a chance and the business went from strength to strength.

The company's luxury safari, Bedouin, bell and dome tents are now found nationwide in resorts, holiday accommodation, at events, wineries and restaurants from North Stradbroke Island to Bendigo.

A team of four installs the tents in two days.

A test centre on Phillip Island, called Sheltered Glamping, hosts six tents where they try new things.

They have extended their range to include glamtainers, now also being sold in New Zealand. Tents are also sold in Bali and Sri Lanka.

Awards and recognition have followed, with their extendible glamtainers named best new product at the 2018 Melbourne Home Show, their

DAVID DAVUTOVIC AND NICHOLAS D'URBANO

LIKE the chirpy wicketkeeper, it is said the more vocal and crazier the better for soccer's equivalent — the goalkeeper. Yet veteran Melbourne City goalkeeper Eugene Galekovic continues to defy that stereotype, remaining one of the most placid A-League players around.

While Bart Schenkeveld is the defensive key, the Dutchman has praised Galekovic's style and contribution to City which has offset its scoring woes by becoming tough to score against, with only Perth Glory and Sydney FC conceding fewer goals.

Schenkeveld, who is hoping to return from a quad strain for Sunday's huge clash away to Wellington Phoenix, said when his gloveman talks everyone listens.

"Some keepers shout all the time. You know when Eugene talks it really means something. He knows exactly when to say something and he feels comfortable," Schenkeveld said. "I think his quality comes with age ... everybody respects him, which is important."

Galekovic, who was expected to play second fiddle to Mark Birighitti this season but has kept his spot, produced another outstanding display in the scoreless draw with Adelaide United last Saturday.

Ahead of Sunday's decisive game — both teams are on 37 points, with Wellington on a superior goal difference — former City keeper Thomas Sorensen praised Galekovic, 37, for reinventing himself.

"He's lost weight, he has reinvented himself and you can see that," he said.

"He is really sharp and is the backbone of the team ... that is also part of him being a professional. I know he puts in the work that is required and that's showing."

The career of Soccerroos-capped Galekovic was on a knife's edge this time last year, when he played second fiddle to Dean Bouzanis after losing his spot while injuring his back in a warm-up earlier in the season. Sorensen praised Galekovic for breaking back into the line-up after a difficult campaign last season — his first after he was dumped by Adelaide.

GUNNERS BACK INTO TOP FOUR

ARSENAL has capitalised on a goalkeeping gaffe from Watford's Ben Foster and a Troy Deeney red card to win 1-0 and move back into the Premier League's top four.

A bizarre 10th-minute goal by striker Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang gave the Gunners the three points and lifted them into a Champions League spot — on 66 points from 33 games, one behind third-placed Tottenham.

Arsenal is ahead of fifth-placed Chelsea — which has played a game more — on goal difference and two points clear of Manchester United in sixth.

Watford stayed 10th with 46 points.

Arsenal manager Unai Emery was pleased with his team's first away clean sheet of the season and third away win since December.

"A clean sheet is very important," he told the BBC.

"It is going to give us a lot of information, this match."

The fast-paced Vicarage Road clash took a decisive turn in a frantic spell early.

Aubameyang found the back of the net in unlikely fashion before Hornets striker Deeney was shown a straight red card for elbowing Lucas Torreira.

Foster dwelled on Daryl Janmaat's back pass for too long, allowing Aubameyang to close him down and block his attempted clearance and the ball ricocheted into the back of the net. "I've said sorry to the lads," Foster said.

Title time when Bells rings

Stephanie Gilmore and the bell. Picture: ALISON WYND

AS OMENS go it's a pretty good one — win the Bells Beach world tour surfing event over Easter and Stephanie Gilmore ends up a world champion later the same year.

The seven-time world champion is well aware that winning form in the second world tour event of the year traditionally springboards her to world title success.

Gilmore rang the winner's bell for the first time in 2007, the year she claimed her first world crown, backed up in 2008, won again in 2010 and then waited eight years to ring the bell for the fourth time in 2018.

"I've won other world titles when I haven't won at Bells but it is clearly an important event for me," Gilmore said.

"It's been apparent how my year goes when I do well here."

A fifth Bells Beach crown will see her surpass American Lisa Andersen's record of four.

Gilmore admits she is fired-up to defend her crown after a less than memorable fifth place in the world tour opener earlier this month at her home break on the Gold Coast. Gilmore was beaten by US teenager Caroline Marks who went on to win the event — the first where women received the same prizemoney as their male counterparts on the world tour.

"I won my first event at 17 and to see Caroline do the same thing was special," Gilmore said.

"To see a young girl stand on centre stage and receive the same cheque as the men's winner ... I really think it was a win for all of us.

"This new generation won't know any different now and that's so good."

But Gilmore, who has her sights set on winning an eighth world crown this year, said losing always motivated her.

"I'm sure everyone who didn't win will be coming here with fresh eyes and motivation," she said. "I know I am feeling extra feisty."

Two-time winner Sally Fitzgibbons is also highly rated to excel at Bells, while other multiple winners competing are Americans Carissa Moore (2013, 2014, 2015) and Courtney Conlogue (2016, 2017).

No current Australian man on the world tour has won a Bells Beach title, with Wade Carmichael, Owen Wright, Julian Wilson and Mikey Wright among those favoured to end the drought.

Kelly Slater surfs at Duranbah Beach on the Gold Coast last week, while Tiger Woods shows off his Masters trophy.

TIGER'S ROAR FIRES UP AGEING SLATER

KELLY Slater will draw on Tiger Woods' US Masters triumph as surfing's greatest competitor aims for a massive comeback win of his own.

Slater said he has related what Woods has done back to his own career ahead of the Rip Curl Pro at Bells Beach.

The 11-time world surfing champion and self-confessed diehard golfer stayed up all night to watch Woods win his 15th major title.

Like Woods, Slater remains at the centre of his sport — but it is eight years since the 47-year-old's most recent world surfing title.

Slater last rung the famous Bells Beach trophy in 2010.

Two years ago, Slater suffered the worst injury of his career when he badly broke his foot.

But just as Woods stared down his rivals at Augusta's Amen Corner, no-one is feared more in the line-up than Slater.

Woods reminded Slater that experience counts for plenty.

"It's big and I think I forget it sometimes," Slater said.

"That's why the timing was so good, for me to see Tiger do that this week.

"I have people telling me every single day 'it's time for you to retire' ... it's funny, because that's what people think about themselves deep down inside."

TIDES TURNS IN WINNING RUN

A sister to three-time Group 1 winner Shoals opened her account with a maiden victory at Bendigo yesterday. The Anthony Freedman-trained Tides won the No Fuss Maiden over 1300m at her second start. Freedman's assistant trainer, son Sam, said Tides would be stepped up in distance. "She's one we want to get out to a trip now," he said. "She really raced like that."

Appleby's new target

LEO SCHLINK

AFTER a rare failure in the Sydney Cup with Dubhe, Godolphin's Charlie Appleby will change tack by targeting Saturday's Group 1 All-Aged Stakes with D'bai.

Renowned for his expertise with stayers, Appleby will throw down the gauntlet to gun Australian sprinters, including Pierata, Osborne Bulls and Le Romain.

Winner of both the Melbourne and Sydney Cups, Appleby showed he was far from a one-trick pony by landing the Group 1 Sir Rupert Clarke Stakes (1400m) at Caulfield last spring with Jungle Cat.

D'bai is part of a two-horse raiding party in Sydney for Appleby. Stablemate Dubhe finished 12th in last Saturday as a drifting $4.40 favourite.

D'bai heads into Saturday's contest first-up, having won easily over 1400m at Group 2 at Meydan in January. Kerrin McEvoy is likely to ride D'bai.

Zahra loses ride

MARK Zahra will tomorrow appeal against a 25-meeting ban for careless riding which has cost him the ride on Santa Ana Lane in the Group 1 Chairman's Sprint in Hong Kong on April 28.

Zahra is appealing against the severity of the suspension, which was originally 30 meetings, after an incident at Randwick on Saturday when Andrew Adkins and Glyn Schofield both fell.

LEO SCHLINK

Adkins is likely to be hospitalised for several more days with multiple facial and vertebral fractures.

Racing NSW stewards said Adkins could require plastic surgery to his face.

Stewards said Zahra's interference while winning the Listed Fernhill Stakes on Lindsay Park's Power Scheme was in the high range.

Zahra was suspended from April 23-June 2 after Persan and War Baron both fell late in the race. He was also fined $3800, almost the equivalent of his winning percentage.

Zahra has been allowed to continue riding after deferring the start of the ban.

Zahra's stay paid off yesterday when Tides — a full sister to recently retired sprint star Shoals — won the No Fuss Maiden at Bendigo.

Santa Ana Lane is scheduled to fly to Hong Kong next week.

The five-time Group 1 winner is likely to start favourite in the Chairman's Sprint Prize.

Trainer Anthony Freedman will decide whether to continue to Royal Ascot after the gelding runs at Sha Tin.

Freedman has engaged Hugh Bowman to ride Santa Ana Lane in Hong Kong, a booking which will hold regardless of Zahra's appeal. Makybe Diva's seventh foal Demand Attention finished a distant eighth behind Tides at Bendigo.

The filly, who raced greenly, was attempting to become the fifth-winning progeny of triple Melbourne Cup winner Makybe Diva. Other foals from the champion mare to have won are Divanation, Rockstardom, Taqneen and Surrey.

BOSS KEEN ON HOME FINISH

CHAMPION jockey Glen Boss says he wants to finish his career in Queensland after having his first spin on the new Eagle Farm course proper yesterday.

The Singapore-based 49-year-old won the Doncaster Mile two weeks ago on Brutal.

"I would like to come up here and finish up.

Queensland is my home and you always come back to roost," he said. "Things seem to be moving in the right direction in this state now which is a real positive.

"When I see real good changes here I will probably make a move back to Queensland.

"It would be a nice, fitting way to finish my career."

GILBERT GARDINER

SOUTH East Melbourne Phoenix has tabled an offer to Sydney Kings free agent Kyle Adnam.

The expansion team could unveil the popular 25-year-old guard next week.

Adnam, who won a championship at Melbourne United before moving to the Harbour City, played all 28 games last season, averaging 6.5 points and 1.5 assists behind Jerome Randle.

The Kilsyth junior held his own previously at Melbourne United, helping the franchise win the 2017-18 NBL title, working closely with Casper Ware and Chris Goulding.

Adnam would be starved for opportunity at the Kings with Ware joining the team next season.

The Phoenix yesterday signed 206cm centre Dane Pineau on a one-year deal from the Kings, with an option for two more seasons.

“Dane is a blue chip defender in the pick and roll,” Phoenix coach Simon Mitchell said. “I think he ranks among the very best in the NBL for bigs.”

HOCKEY IN SWITCH

MICHAEL RANDALL

AUSTRALIA’S domestic hockey scene has taken a leaf out of cricket’s Big Bash for a “reimagined” national competition.

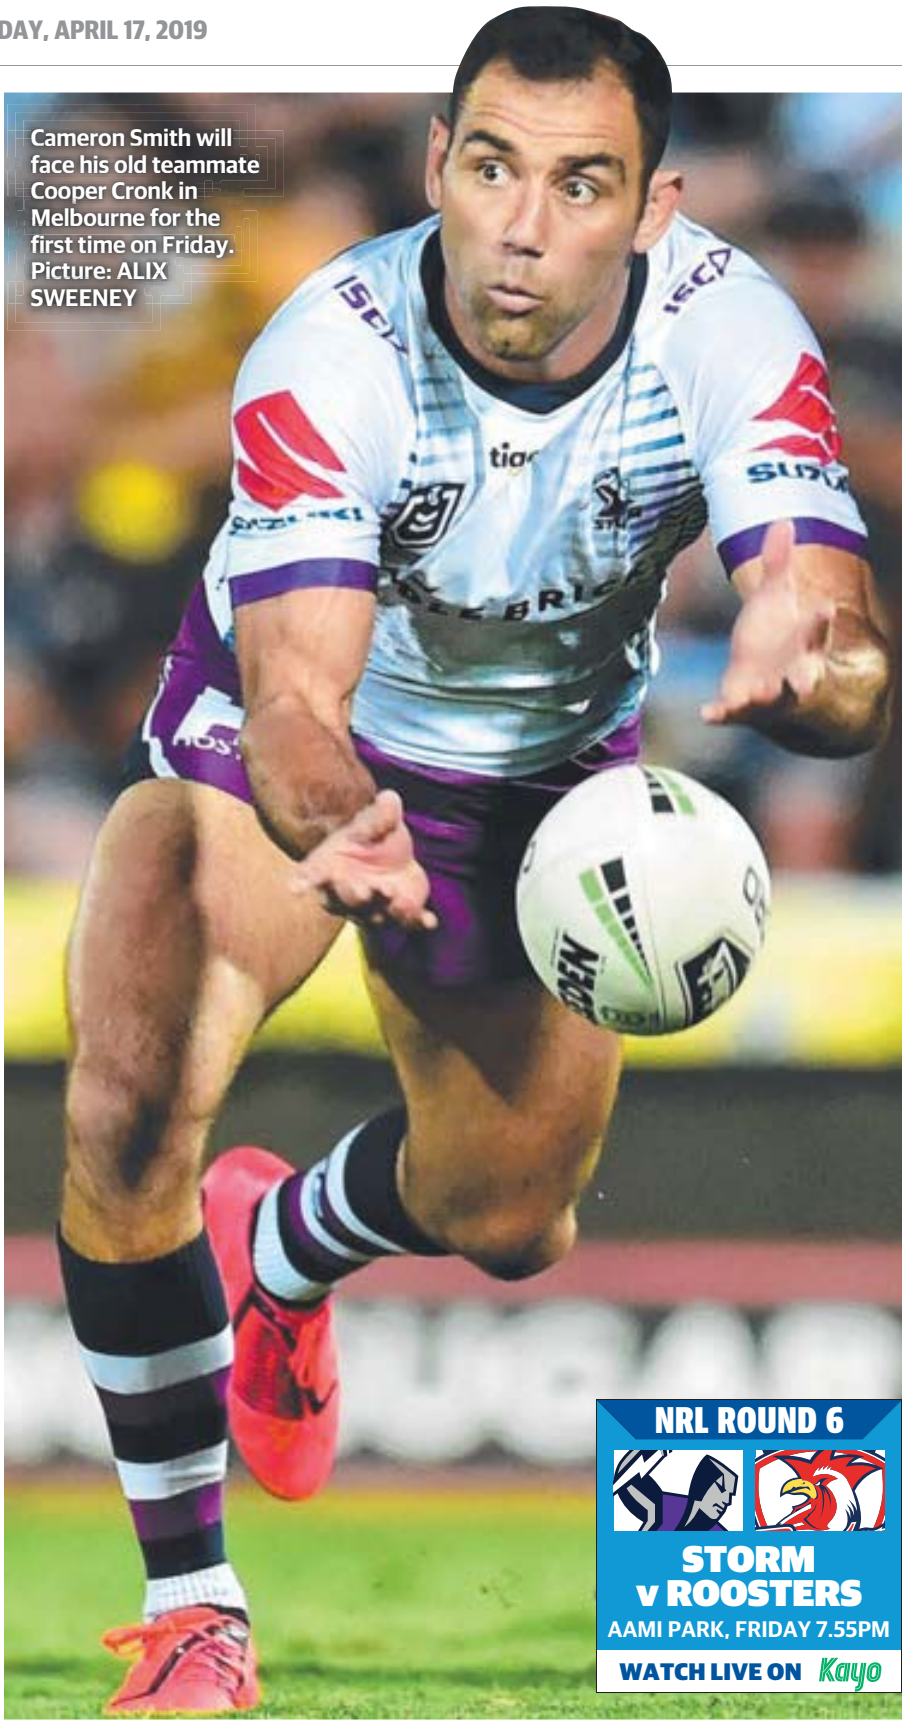

Hockey One will replace the Australian Hockey League and feature seven new united clubs battling it out in both men’s and women’s competitions.

Matches will be streamed live on Kayo Sports and stretch over six weeks from mid-September.

Hockey Club Melbourne will be the new Victorian-based club, replacing the old Vikings and Vipers, while Adelaide, Brisbane, Canberra, NSW, Perth and Tasmania all have teams.

Hockey Australia chief executive Matt Favier said the new league would “strive to put fans first”.

BARCA IN DNA

Rooster: Storm coach key

FATIMA KDOUH

SYDNEY Roosters five-eighth Luke Keary has compared Melbourne to the European football juggernaut of FC Barcelona ahead of Good Friday’s epic grand final rematch.

On the face of it, the Storm’s wrestle and grind has little in common with the tiki-taka style of Barcelona.

But that iconic brand of quick precision passing to maintain possession has helped them become the most successful football team of the past two decades, having won 10 La Liga titles since 1999 and five Champions League trophies since 1992.

Like Barca, Keary believes the Storm’s uncompromising professionalism and strangle approach on the field makes the Storm the hardest side to beat in the NRL.

“You see it in the soccer, Barcelona have a certain style,” Keary said. “It’s the same with Melbourne, you know they are going to play a certain way.”

“They’re going to play that way, they’re constantly going to do that to you and they just wear you down.”

“You have to come with your A-game and perform at the highest level to beat them. It’s their DNA. They’re the super club of the NRL.”

Keary said having a distinct “brand” of rugby league has helped Storm coach Craig Bellamy mould every player in his side into the prototype needed to execute his game plans.

“It’s the culture of the club, it’s Craig Bellamy ... he’s had that many players come and go. It doesn’t matter who is there or who isn’t there, they have a style of play and they’re going to play it,” he said.

Parallels can be drawn between the two sporting outfits and the way they have turned their respective home grounds into fortresses.

Barcelona was undefeated for 42 games straight until November last year.

Fox Sports Lab stats show Storm have played 116 games at AAMI Park for a winning record of 75 per cent — the best win rate of any active home ground in the NRL.

Good Friday’s clash will be the first time halfback Cooper Cronk comes up against his old team in Melbourne.

Keary is backing his experienced halves to overcome any emotion on the night.

“He doesn’t just seem like he’s an iceman, he is an iceman. He’ll be fine,” Keary said. fatima.kdouh@news.com.au

NRL chief ‘had no evidence’ against Dragon

NRL chief executive Todd Greenberg has admitted he did not have any evidence of Jack de Belin’s misbehaviour before he was stood down.

The game’s boss took the stand in the Federal Court yesterday as the St George Illawarra forward’s challenge to the game’s “no fault” stand-down policy continued.

De Belin is suing the ARL Commission and the NRL after he was stood down under the game’s controversial new rules which were penned on February 28 and rubber-stamped in March.

Barrister Martin Einfeld questioned Greenberg about his motives for introducing the new rules.

De Belin was not present during Greenberg’s two hours of testimony in the afternoon.

The Dragons star was stood down after he was charged with the aggravated sexual assault of a 19-year-old woman.

He has pleaded not guilty. The case is scheduled to be mentioned in Wollongong Local Court today.

Under the NRL’s “no fault” rules, the game can stand down any player charged with a serious crime which carries a jail term of 11 years or more.

Einfeld argued Greenberg and the game had no right to stand De Belin down given they did not have any evidence.

“The only evidence I had was the charge he was facing,”

Greenberg said. Einfeld pointed to a February 27 tweet by ARL Commission chairman Peter Beattie in which he said: “De Belin is innocent unless proven guilty. Neither I, nor the ARLC & NRL are in possession of any evidence that enable us to form a view on this matter.”

The case continues today.

New Magpies skipper Geva Mentor is all set for the new season, after an off-season that included a trip through the Rockies with Collingwood's Mason Cox (inset). Picture: AAP

Rocky road to a new start at Pies

NEW Magpies co-captain Geva Mentor has revealed how an off-season in the Canadian Rocky Mountains helped her find herself again after a challenging year off-court.

After leading the Sunshine Coast Lightning to the past two championships, Mentor is one of the key recruits in the new-look Magpies line-up for the 2019 Super Netball season.

The English goal keeper will captain the team alongside midcourter Madi Browne — who has reverted to her maiden name — in her fourth team after stints at the Adelaide Thunderbirds and Melbourne Vixens in the former trans-Tasman league.

Mentor revealed a desire to take herself out of her comfort zone was behind her decision to leave the premiers for a fresh start with the Magpies.

While she claimed Commonwealth Games gold with England and a second title with Lightning, it was a challenging period for Mentor last year with the breakdown of her marriage.

The star defender said escaping overseas post-season had helped her find the love for herself again.

"Canada was beautiful. It really puts life into perspective," Mentor said.

"Being able to travel with good people. It just meant I was able to open my mind, open my heart up again and just find the love for myself.

"Obviously (my on-court) performance was always there and I was able to focus in on what I needed to do.

"But at the end of the day I lost who I was as a person. To find out who I was again, to rebuild that and then to have someone lovely come into my life again was pretty awesome."

That someone has been Collingwood ruckman Mason Cox, with whom she shared her off-season travel adventures on social media.

"One's American and one's English, although we have so much in common. Our common ground is travel and our love and appreciation for the world around us," Mentor said.

"We are enjoying our time and I think come off-season again you'll find us off gallivanting around the world somewhere else.

"We're taking it nice and steady, but the main thing is we're having fun and enjoying each other's company.

"The funniest thing was (explaining my) CBE and updating him on what the Queen's honours list was all about because he had no idea.

"I'm looking forward to when I go to receive that, taking Mason with me and showing him around Buckingham Palace and what it's all about."

At 34, Mentor has signed a two-year deal with the Pies, but is confident she has plenty of netball left in her.

"I still feel all right. For me age is just a number at the moment. Touch wood, the body is still going," Mentor said.

"I'd like to think that I've got quite a few more years left in me."

Mentor was ready for the challenge of helping the Magpies find success after the team failed to live up to expectations in its first two seasons.

She will face her old Lightning teammates in a Round 1 double-header after the Vixens-Firebirds play at Melbourne Arena Saturday week.

The Magpies are hopeful Browne (knee) and her sister Kelsey (ankle) will be fit for the opening round after they were hurt in a pre-season game in Bendigo earlier this month.

Vixens captain Kate Moloney, meanwhile, has promised an aggressive edge from the her side this season after missing the finals last year.

"We didn't make finals so there needs to be a lot of improvement in a lot of areas," Moloney said.

"We want to hit the court and be a real presence out there. We want to be aggressive ... going out there and stamping our authority early and showing what the Vixens are about. We want to be a team that goes and goes and is relentless right until the last whistle."

Smith CV bumps Pete

STEVE Smith's standing as an "all-time great of Australian cricket" has cost in-form batsman Pete Handscomb his shot at World Cup glory.

Australian coach Justin Langer revealed yesterday that Smith's reputation and his ability to resume Handscomb's middle-order role crystallised the decision to dump the Victorian from the 15-man squad.

That bold call has heaped pressure on Smith to perform on the world's biggest stage.

Captain Aaron Finch ad-

SAM LANDSBERGER

mitted on Monday Smith wasn't setting the world on fire in the Indian Premier League.

While David Warner leads the IPL with 400 runs at a healthy strike-rate of 140.4, Smith is 23rd on the runs list with 186.

Smith's strike-rate of 107.5 ranks 43rd and he is still battling an elbow injury.

Handscomb, 27, has played all 13 one-dayers for Australia this year, averaging 43.5 and posting a maiden century (117 off 105 balls) in India.

Smith, 29, has not scored an ODI century for more than two years. Ironically, it came in Handscomb's sparkling debut as he contributed 82 runs.

Victorian coach Andrew McDonald last week selected Handscomb in his best World Cup XI — and left Smith out.

"I can't tell you how close (Handscomb) was to being selected," Langer said on RSN radio yesterday.

"He had a brilliant time. He played exactly the role that we talked about for the back-end of the ODI summer in Australia and through India and the UAE.

"He did a great job, he's super fit, he's a terrific young bloke and he gets on and does his job.

"We just felt that Steve Smith would play that same role and Steve Smith's one of the all-time greats of Australian cricket."

Langer said Finch's tactical nous had improved during his recent lean patch with the bat, but warned that runs were still required.

"The most important thing about the captain of Australia is they're scoring runs, or, in Painey's case he's wicketkeeping brilliantly," Langer said.

"Because when the captain's on top of their game everyone gains great confidence from that."

Finch averaged 15.8 runs across nine ODIs amid a poor stretch where his Test career also fell over. But he bounced back to life with a 93 against India and then two centuries against Pakistan.

Handscomb's ability to wicketkeep didn't help his World Cup cause when selectors Langer, Trevor Hohns and Greg Chappell finalised the squad in Perth last week.

They felt they could easily replace keeper Alex Carey should he break a finger with Handscomb, Tim Paine and Matthew Wade all in England for the Australia A tour.

WILLIAMS CLIPS WARRIOR MACHINE

LOU Williams led the Los Angeles Clippers to the biggest post-season comeback in NBA history yesterday.

Landry Shamet hit a go-ahead 3-pointer with 16.5 seconds left, Stephen Curry couldn't answer on the other end as the Clippers rallied from 31 points down on the road to stun the Golden State Warriors 135-131 to even their first-round playoff series.

The comeback topped a 29-point rally by the LA Lakers in 1989 against Seattle.

Curry scored 29 points and put the Warriors up 131-128 with 58 seconds left before Shamet's dagger on a night the two-time defending NBA champions lost DeMarcus Cousins to a leg injury.

"We changed a couple things offensively and defensively in the third on the fly. It worked out for us. But I thought it was our spirit more than anything," Clippers coach Doc Rivers said. "Just every single guy. I loved the end of the game."

Williams finished with 36 points.

"When I say we stopped playing, we stopped playing, like defence, offence, execution-wise we were not as engaged as we needed to be," Warriors coach Steve Kerr said.

"We got exactly what we deserved. The Clippers were great. They executed, they were hungry, they stayed connected. They were together."

Cousins suffered what Kerr described as a "pretty significant quad injury" while running for a loose ball early in the first quarter.

Entering after Cousins' injury, Australian Andrew Bogut had three points and nine rebounds in 16 minutes, and is likely to be elevated to the starting line-up.

Cousins will undergo an MRI today.

Simmo in form on the double

BEN Simmons got another earful from the Philly crowd.

But this time the same 76ers fans Simmons that booed him in the playoff opener were going wild for him in Game 2.

He had 18 points, 12 assists and 10 rebounds and the Philadelphia 76ers had an answer for the pesky Brooklyn Nets in a 145-123 win to even their Eastern Conference playoff series to the approval of the fans.

Simmons even cupped a hand to his right ear just like Allen Iverson's signature move to spur the cheers even louder.

And he did it with Iverson cheering on the Sixers from courtside.

"I was just trying to be me," Simmons said.

Simmons had a disastrous Game 1 on the court and from a PR perspective after he criticised fans for booing during a game the Sixers were never really in.

He backtracked the next day, and 20,591 fans couldn't do anything but roar in approval in Game 2.

Simmons was aggressive from the tip-off. He used his size and speed to attack the lane and scored 16 points in the half en route to his second career postseason triple-double.

The Sixers busted the game open with a 14-0 run to start the second half and stretched the lead to 20 on a Simmons steal and fast break basket.

With a packed house standing, Simmons got a massive ovation when he cupped his hand to his right ear just like Iverson did in his prime.

"I was thinking about the boos from the last game," Simmons said. "I have a lot of love for this city."

The Sixers got a little something from everybody in this one. The Nets collapsed in the second half, outplayed and overmatched much as expected by pundits and bookmakers, going into the match as 7.5-point underdogs.

"Everybody's got to bring it," Sixers All-Star centre Joel Embiid said.

"We need everybody."

Before the match, Nets coach Kenny Atkinson said his team was expecting "a hay-maker".

"They're too good, too talented. too well coached. It's coming. It's going to be how we react," he said.

Not well.

Embiid played through tendinitis in his left knee and delivered after a sluggish Game 1, scoring 13 points in the third quarter as the Sixers raced to a 29-point lead.

"Whenever I'm out there, I kind of forget about the pain and just try and do the right things," Embiid said.

Embiid had some unexpected help from popular backup Boban Marjanovic.

Embiid had 23 points and 10 rebounds, and Marjanovic scored 16.

The Nets head home for Games 3 and 4 in the series.

Folau appeal sets up stoush

GAY staff at Rugby Australia could have grounds for action against their employer or Israel Folau if he successfully appeals his termination for homophobic social media posts.

The Herald Sun understands that after re-signing with his employer for four years in a deal worth $4 million, Rugby Australia then attempted to have additional social media clauses inserted into Folau's contract. But because the contract had been signed, Folau refused, and the contract remained standard.

This could be used by RA staff to prove their employer did not take necessary measures to protect them under the NSW Anti-Discrimination Act.

JAMIE PANDARAM

Folau is expected to appeal Rugby Australia's decision to sack him by heading to a code of conduct hearing, which is likely to stretch into next month given the upcoming public holidays and time it will take to assemble an independent three-person panel.

He has until 2pm today to lodge his intention to fight termination.

RA will rely on the argument he has breached the standard player code of conduct by vilifying people based on their sexuality, and also breached the official warning letter he was given last year.

Folau is expected to argue he has not intentionally vilified anyone because of their sexuality, but is merely quoting Bible scripture, and is being punished for expressing what is stated in his religion.

The lack of a specific social media clause will form a big part of Folau's defence, calling into question the process undertaken by RA chief Raelene Castle and her team when re-signing the star this year.

It is uncharted territory for Australian sport and workplace law. However, if Folau wins his case, lawyers say it could open the door for action by other RA employees who feel vilified by his posts, including gay members of Australia's women's rugby teams.

WARNING OVER ANTI-GAY 'LIKE'

ENGLAND No.8 Billy Vunipola was formally warned about his future conduct by his club side Saracens yesterday after defending an anti-gay post published on Instagram by fellow rugby star Israel Folau.

"He made a serious error of judgment in publicly sharing his opinion," Saracens said of Vunipola, "which is inconsistent with the values of the club and contravenes his contractual obligations." Vunipola said his "intention was never to cause suffering", but he stopped short of offering an apology. "My intention was to express my belief in the word of God," he said.

Hocking: Still too early for verdict on new rules

THE jury remains out on the impact of the new rules, according to AFL football boss Steve Hocking.

With scoring down, marks increased and more contested possessions among a host of numerical changes, Hocking said yesterday the new rules, coaches and West Coast's game style were all contributors to the current style of the game.

The new kick-in rule and the 6-6-6 rule, which were introduced this season, have been key topics of discussion as evaluations are made across the first four rounds, particularly of the lower scoring.

MARK ROBINSON

"It's up and down the scoring at the moment," Hocking told the Herald Sun. "I think clubs are still working it out."

"It's a still way off revealing what direction the game is headed in."

"Who is going to develop the next style of play that's going to, not revolutionise the game, but take it in a direction?"

"Hand on heart, I can't answer that and I think we're waiting for that to reveal itself."

He said anyone who believed they had a handle on the direction of football "may not be watching enough footy".

"The jury is out and it will be for a little while yet," he said.

"Clubs are actually working out what will happen, they will actually spend time analysing what everyone's doing and learn from one another."

"What we tried to do was shift that bubble at the 50m arc and we've done that, it's probably been pushed right back to the centre of the ground, but what's happening, at times, is they are not getting beyond that, but at times they are and they're not finishing with goals."

Hocking said the immediate future excited him because of how coaches will devise new strategies.

"Over time things reveal themselves and change happens, and it happens right throughout a season," he said.

"I use Malcolm Blight's analogy; it's a marathon and not a sprint, and these clubs will be working on a whole host of different strategies over the coming weeks and months."

Hocking refused to buy into supporter backlash over the rules and, while acknowledging there were teams who played slow, said there had been plenty of close games, only Carlton had not won yet, and individuals were kicking bags of goals.

Hocking is confident the new rules will have a positive impact. And the ability of teams to get back into games has been noted.

"That's one of the pleasing things that's come out of the changes," he said. "The game is now up for grabs much later."

"We get heavily focused on the scoring aspect, but this has been really positive."

QUIRKY MATES AT ODDS

VETERAN ruckman Stefan Martin is bracing for a litmus test against All-Australian Brodie Grundy, but there'll be no hard feelings when the pair go toe to toe tomorrow.

In a twist to the Gabba sellout between Brisbane and Collingwood, Martin says he and Grundy share a bond off the field fuelled by mutual respect and a few quirks.

The pair met during the off-season, with Martin joking they immediately warmed to each other's "left of centre" personalities.

"I've caught up with him a couple of times and it's been good," Martin said.

"We're pretty similar blokes, which is good 'cause we're both a bit left of centre."

"A few blokes who have played with both of us say we're similar so it was nice to pick each other's brains a bit about footy and stuff."

Chemistry lesson

COLLINGWOOD ace Dayne Beams says the Magpies' mid-field must "put our bodies in better positions" to make the most of Brodie Grundy's ruck dominance.

The Pies won the clearances by seven last week despite All-Australian Grundy's 58 hit-outs to Western Bulldogs' developing big man Tim English's six.

Beams, 29, a late withdrawal last week following a migraine and bout of gastro, has been cleared to play against Brisbane Lions tomorrow night at the Gabba.

GILBERT GARDINER

"Opposition teams put a fair bit of time into Brodes," Beams said. "We've got to capitalise on it a lot better ... teams are getting better at sharking him."

Beams said his connection with Grundy would also get better the more games he played after an interrupted off-season. Despite existing relationships with veterans Scott Pendlebury and Steele Sidebottom, the ex-Lions captain yesterday said he'd had to "learn how Collingwood plays" again.

"There's obviously tweaks and there's differences in the way the side played to the way I played in Brisbane," he said.

"He (Grundy) wasn't No.1 ruckman when I left (end of 2014) and trying to figure out chemistry with him and guys like Taylor Adams and Adam Treloar ... it's about finding that chemistry because you can have all the depth in the world but if you don't make it work then it's no real point."

Beams yesterday praised the Lions' start to the season, which the Merrett-Murray medallist has "genuinely loved watching from afar like a "supporter".

But any friendships and bonds with existing Lions players and staff will be placed on hold when the ball is bounced.

"It's something that I've done before, playing for Brisbane and coming up against Collingwood ... honestly it's just another game," he said.

"When we used to play Collingwood at the Gabba I used to get booed by Collingwood fans and it was louder than the Brisbane fans so it could be interesting. I could actually get cheered at the away ground."

Meanwhile, coach Nathan Buckley yesterday confirmed Collingwood would consider managing injury-prone stars Darcy Moore and Jamie Elliott at times this season.

"We will plan to pre-emptively rotate our players and freshen them up at times ... (around byes and longer breaks built into the season) if we feel like we have someone that can come up and we're not dropping too much, and we can still maintain the balance of the side, we'll look to do that," Buckley said.

WEIDEMAN TALKS HIT EARLY BUMP

A HUGE opening gambit from Sam Weideman's management is behind protracted contract negotiations between the forward and Melbourne.

The Herald Sun understands Weideman's management surprised the Demons when they proposed a deal in the vicinity of $650,000 a year for the 21-year-old, who falls out of contract at season's end.

Weideman, the No.9 draft pick in 2015, has started to show promise at AFL level.

He kicked three goals from 24 possessions and seven marks in a breakout game against Geelong in last year's elimination final. But the Demons' view is that sort of money is too much for a 24-game player with much development ahead of him.

The Demons, meanwhile, are among several clubs on red alert as Zak Jones weighs up his future at Sydney. The brother of Melbourne co-captain Nathan has long been linked with a move home but there is a feeling among clubs he is gettable this year.

Four more for Jaeger

HAWTHORN has locked away Jaeger O'Meara for another four years in a move that could help it secure another key trade target.

The former Gold Coast midfielder has become the leader of Hawthorn's engine room in the absence of injured Brownlow medallist Tom Mitchell. The 25-year-old's decision to sign a long-term extension will bolster the Hawks' hopes of luring Greater Western Sydney star Stephen Coniglio, who is close friends with O'Meara.

Coniglio is a restricted free agent at season's end, meaning the Giants can match any offer for his services. The Giants also hope to retain Josh Kelly.

CATS AWAIT EASTER EPIC

TOM Hawkins knows playing Hawthorn sits “above any other” opposition as he prepares to launch into another Easter Monday epic.

The Geelong forward said the clash was always highly anticipated by the top-of-the-table Cats, as the Hawks jostle for a top-eight position.

“It’s always a bit of a weird weekend being Easter and people in Geelong tend to get out of town, so it becomes quite quiet when we’re working away.

“It’s a great game to play in. I’ll be honest — I reckon they’re clearly above any other. There’s a lot that got talked about with the Kennett curse and the pact that was made inside the football club. I don’t remember that, but what I do know is we’ve played in some unbelievable games.

“A few in particular have been as close to finals-like games that I can relate to in-season.”

Tigers nab Sab

Sabrina Frederick has joined Richmond's new AFLW team. Picture: DAVID CROSLING

Frederick signing a coup for Richmond

MELBOURNE life suits Sabrina Frederick. But hook turns pose an entirely different beast for the new Tiger. The former Brisbane forward is one of the biggest moves of this AFL Women's off-season, uprooting from the sunshine state to call Punt Road home. Her excitement was evident as she donned the yellow and black for the first time — signing yesterday as one of the club's foundation AFLW players — and is familiar with the club's famous song after belting it out as a junior. “It's like your first day of school,” Frederick said. “You're meeting new people so excited, but there's still the unknown. I'm still figuring it all out, but I'm really excited to be here and to be a part of the Richmond Football Club.” One of those new people was “awesome” premiership Tiger and injured star Alex Rance — who was one of the first to welcome the club's newest power forward — with another familiar face in former junior Pinjarra Tigers teammate Kamdyn McIntosh. The forward arc will be a busy one, after fellow star Katie Brennan signed at Richmond last week. “I think she's a great human being — a great talent,” Frederick said. “She's in the same boat as me — wants a fresh start and just excited to be a part of history. We're lucky enough to have the opportunity where we can be a part of all that at the very start and we can create something here at Richmond that will last way beyond our time. “We're on the same page. I love her to bits and I can't wait. To have her in the forward 50 with me, it's going to be so much fun.” Richmond traded its first-round selection in this year's AFLW national draft — currently pick 12 — for the England-born star. Leaving Brisbane — where she played 23 games including two losing grand finals after being one of the Lions' inaugural marquee figures — wasn't easy. It wasn't just about football, with an eye to the future a key factor for Frederick and her Victorian fiancée Lili as they plan their late-2020 nuptials. “We got to a point in our lives that we want to be around family and we want to start a family of our own,” Frederick said. “There's more to life than just footy.” lauren.wood@news.com.au

LAUREN WOOD

McDonald suspension upheld ROOS PUT GUNS DOWN

LUKE McDonald's bid for a Good Friday resurrection failed last night when his one-match suspension was upheld by the tribunal.

The jury agreed with match review officer Michael Christian's assessment that the North Melbourne defender's late spoil on Adelaide's Chayce Jones was medium impact, and high and careless conduct.

McDonald, 24, will miss the Good Friday blockbuster against Essendon, breaking his streak of 50 games.

SAM LANDSBERGER

Chayce is all right and he can get up this weekend,” McDonald said as he left the hearing.

Asked whether he was confused by what was legal, McDonald said: “I haven't really given it too much thought ... but I suppose it's something I probably should look at.”

The verdict was an important win for Christian given the tribunal halved Dustin Martin's two-match ban last week and freed Collingwood's Mason Cox the week before.

Greater Western Sydney's Shane Mumford had his pre-season MRO ban overturned by the tribunal.

The Crows' medical report confirmed Jones suffered concussion and was in doubt for Sunday's clash against Gold Coast. It stated Jones would miss “1-5 days of training and 0-1 matches” as he undergoes concussion protocols.

The hearing lasted just 22 minutes. AFL counsel Jeff Gleeson QC argued McDonald had a reasonable opportunity to slow down and minimise contact after it became clear he was too late to spoil. “He could have and should have stopped,” he said.

NORTH Melbourne might have been guilty of trying to run before it could walk this season, but it's a mistake it won't make again.

The handbrake is back on at Arden Street after its three-game losing start to the season was ended with a win over Adelaide on Saturday night that coach Brad Scott said showcased “the brand we want to play”.

Given North kicked just nine goals in that affair, it's likely a shutdown could be on again on Friday against an Essendon team that has kicked 37 goals in the past fortnight. “We were looking to attack and score more but we conceded 144 points in the first round,” he said. “That's certainly unsustainable so we made a quick adjustment.

“We still believe that to be a really good consistent team you've got to be able to score.

“We'll certainly be looking to do that but (we're) trying to get as much balance in our game as possible.”

Scott said he expected Essendon spearhead Joe Daniher to play in the Good Friday clash.

“Our intel is that he'll play,” Scott said.

BUDDYShaw: Lance's best hope for a flag is to go

COLLINGWOOD legend Tony Shaw has called on Sydney to offload Lance Franklin and urged the Magpies to pursue the superstar.

Sydney refused to comment yesterday on speculation brewing about their $10 million man after former Western Bulldogs captain Bob Murphy suggested "there's a lot going on behind the scenes".

The Swans' poor start to the season has given rise to the theory their premiership window is almost closed, and Murphy said Franklin, 32, could adopt the mindset of NBA icon LeBron James and switch to a genuine contender for one last tilt at a flag.

Shaw said if Sydney were to accept their "premiership window" was about to shut, they could strike while the iron was hot on Franklin and land top draft picks that could set them up for another era of dominance.

Melbourne clubs led by St Kilda are reportedly set to target the off-contract Zak Jones, who has been Sydney's best player this season.

"Buddy's got four years left on his (nine-year) contract," Shaw told the Herald Sun. "A lot of things can happen in four years, but say, the next two years, do you think you can see the Sydney Swans winning a premiership?"

"They've been a fan-

LANCE FRANKLINBEN HORNE
SYDNEY

tastic club and things turn around ... but I'm thinking maybe while Buddy still has a little bit to offer you can go the reverse and build long term and get some, I would think, very early draft picks.

"Also ... who has developed as another forward (at Sydney) while Buddy has been there?"

"People say he's been great for marketing, which he has been, but it's more about premierships. He might think it (a flag) is going to happen there. But I just see some issues."

Shaw said if Collingwood had the salary cap space, Franklin would be an ideal fit.

"I'd still think he's got currency. He'd probably suit my old side Collingwood if they could fit him in, but I don't know if they could fit him in," he said.

The Pies' salary cap space could hinge on the future of $1 million star Brodie Grundy, who becomes a free agent next year.

"Buddy probably doesn't want to go. I think he's planted up there ... and I don't think it'd happen because it'd be too much of a big decision," Shaw said. "But footy is a funny game."

ROCKY ROAD FOR NEW PIE & CLUB FIXTURES, PAGE 70

Pagan: Silvagni needs clear air, new club

FORMER Carlton coach Denis Pagan has urged out-of-contract utility Jack Silvagni to ask for a trade as the Blues prepare to secure a dangerous small or mid-sized forward in the off-season.

Silvagni is in the mix to play his first senior game this year against the Western Bulldogs on Sunday on the back of a 20-possession, two-goal outing in the VFL.

His father Steve Silvagni is

the club's list manager, but is a tough spot given the conflict of interest.

He would be desperate for his son to return to the AFL, but must consider whether to trade for another medium-sized forward after securing Alex Fasolo last year.

Pagan believes his coaching career at North Melbourne ended after he selected his son Ryan to play after brilliant VFL form, despite opposition from others within the club.

Silvagni is only 21, but a lack of breakneck speed or pure endurance has made it hard for him to thrive as a forward.

"If I was Jack Silvagni I would get out. He can't win at Carlton," Pagan told the Herald Sun.

"SOS can't win, Jack can't win and Brendon Bolton can't win.

"It doesn't matter what you do. You can be hard on your son — harder than anyone else — and you can't win.

"I feel sorry for Jack and I feel sorry for Steve. It doesn't matter what they do, there are always going to be people there talking about nepotism."

Carlton's forward line woes have mainly centred on mid-field-forward connection issues, but the Blues are crying out for a star small forward.

INFECTION SLOWS DON

ESSENDON midfielder jet David Zaharakis is battling an infection in his leg ahead of the Good Friday clash against North Melbourne.

Zaharakis, 29, was hospitalised yesterday for treatment on a cut to his knee he suffered in the win over Brisbane on Saturday.

It was bandaged and he returned to the field.

Essendon is hopeful he will take on the Roos, but the infection has put a cloud over his fitness leading into the match at Marvel Stadium.

Coach John Worsfold yesterday said Zaharakis was slated to "have a run" today to prepare for Friday's clash.

The Bombers are also weighing up whether to play spearhead Joe Daniher in the AFL or VFL in his return from a calf problem.

— ACCURACY
— SCORE PER INSIDE 50

IF DOM SHEED MISSED THIS GOAL, WOULD FOOTY LOOK DIFFERENT IN 2019?

GOAL NEW BALL GAME AFL SCORING IN DECLINE

Inside footy's sleeping pill

THE snoozefest strangling the AFL is being orchestrated by coaches paranoid about coughing up possession.

The game is in the grip of a scoring crisis. The average score per team per game after Round 4 has plummeted to 80.1 — the lowest since 1967.

But forget the rule changes as a factor. The ingredients in footy's sleeping pill instead have their genesis in ultra-cautious ball movement designed to prevent turnovers.

As Hawthorn coach Alastair Clarkson said on Sunday night: "They are strange games at the minute."

So strange that history is being made in the defensive half of the ground.

Teams are playing on the least they ever have in the back half, breaking into space from a mark just 28.8 per cent of the

FIELD

time, and we've seen the most uncontested marks in the back half since 2008.

Sides are also increasingly reluctant to handball in this area of the field and the highest kick-to-handball ratio since 2006 has ensued.

Thrilling, slingshot counter attacking is now seen as the equivalent of a wildebeest running into a lion pride — no one wants to get munched.

"At the moment I'm noticing a few teams controlling the ball a fair bit," North Melbourne coach Brad Scott told AFL 360. "Uncontested marks are going up, so when there's ball control naturally there's less scoring because sides are trying to hold onto the ball rather than the ballistic back-line to forward line, full-length of the ground transition."

The AFL is a follow-the-leader industry and it's no surprise West Coast kicks the ball more than any other team in the competition.

But the Eagles are still positive with their possession game. What's the old saying? Beware of imitations?

Ours was a game based on turnovers — force the opposition into committing them and then score from them, particularly in the forward half.

But the go-slow approach has seen scores from turnovers plummet from 54 points a game last year to 46.7 this season — the lowest after Round 4 since 2002.

Teams are getting the ball inside 50. In fact, an average match is producing the most inside 50s since 2000 at 53.8. That's the good.

The glaring problem is that by the time it gets inside the forward arc, London's population is in there too. That's the bad, hence the lowest score per inside 50 ratio — 42 per cent — since Champion Data started recording the stat in 1999.

Such is the copycat nature of the competition, it's not a stretch to say that if Dom Sheed had missed that boundary line shot on Grand Final day we may have had a very different looking game.

As Scott said: "It will just change to whatever is winning at the time."

Tiger's heavy medal

AVID golf nut DONALD TRUMP was so moved by TIGER WOODS' Masters victory that he's decided to award him a medal.

Naturally the US president let the world know via Twitter.

"Spoke to @TigerWoods to congratulate him on the great victory he had in yesterday's @TheMasters, & to inform him that because of his incredible Success & Comeback in Sports (Golf) and, more importantly, LIFE, I will be presenting him with the PRESIDENTIAL MEDAL OF FREEDOM!"

The medal, the nation's highest civilian honour, is bestowed by the president to individuals deemed to have made especially meritorious contributions to the security or national interests of the United States, to world peace, or to cultural or other significant public or private endeavours.

Trump has presented the Medal of Freedom to numerous athletes since taking office, including NFL players ALAN PAGE and ROGER STAUBACH, and a posthumous award to baseball legend BABE RUTH.

CLUB 'CURSE' NAMED

ITALIAN club Roma has gone on the front foot about the latest curse to sweep the world game.

The Serie A giant has named the man they believe is a threat to clubs across the globe.

Roma's Twitter account has banned its players from having pictures taken with Drake.

Paris Saint-Germain's fullback LAYVIN KURZAWA was the latest victim. He posed with the rapper (inset) and was then part of the club's heaviest league defeat in 19 years when they lost 5-1 to Lille.

Arsenal forward PIERRE-EMERICK AUBAMEYANG was pictured with Drake (top left) on April 2. The Gunners then lost to Everton 1-0 at Goodison Park.

PAUL POGBA is also on the list after smiling last month for a picture with Drake (top right) while his Manchester United teammates MARCUS RASHFORD and JESSE LINGARD watched on. United was then dumped out of the FA Cup by Wolves.

Check the fixture, Hawks

HAWTHORN players looked a bit confused last Sunday after their shock loss to St Kilda at Docklands.

We can reveal the confusion may have slipped into the mindset in the build-up to Round 4 — specifically around what day the game was scheduled.

Our golf spies at Huntingdale revealed three Hawthorn players were booked to play last Sunday morning with an 11.43am tee time.

This seemed a tad adventurous given the St Kilda game was scheduled to start at 3.20pm.

JACK GUNSTON, LUKE BREUST and JAMES SICILY were all named on the electronic booking system used by Huntingdale members.
